G. E. Smith, the "J. Rufus Wallingford" of Arcadia, Wis., a resident of an exclusive Sheridan Road apartment house in Chicago, and a former Waupun convict for embezzlement, tried to jump from the platform of a speeding interurban car between Evanston, Ill., and Milwaukee Saturday night as he was being returned to Trempealeau county on extradition warrants issued by Governor Philip of Wisconsin and Governor Dunn of Illinois for the alleged skimming of $40,000 from Henry W. Zeller, Frank J. Zeller and George J. Zeller, brothers and prominent wealthy farmers of Arcadia.

Smith was introduced to the farmers by Joseph Ruth, former cashier of the Bank of Arcadia, and a cousin relative of the Zellers, whom Smith had met while they were being served "time" at Waupun. The same that he worked on the country took as a clever bit of "high finance" engineering as was ever told between the covers of a dime novel.

Many prominent men involved in this arrest may result in the naming of seven prominent Illinois and Wisconsin figures, officers of the American Insurance company of Illinois in a conspiracy to defraud parties which Judge Cowie said to have been started for the Zellers in Chicago courts shortly.

Smith was arrested by Sheriff Edward Torgerson, Whitehall, and two Chicago police detectives through information obtained by Judge R. S. Cowie, prominent attorney of Whitehall, as he returned to his apartment at 274 Sheridan Road at supper time Saturday night. Smith's wife pleaded with the detectives not to arrest him, and frantically endeavored to catch him evade capture. Smith denied that he was "Smith" until threatened with a trip to the identification bureau of the Chicago police department.

Held in Custody Here
In the custody of Sheriff Torgerson and Judge Cowie, Smith arrived in La Crosse on the 6 o'clock passenger train last night, and was placed in the hands of the police until taken to Whitehall this morning.

Fearing Smith would start halcyon proceedings in Chicago, Sheriff Torgerson rushed him into an automobile and hustled him to Evanston, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, where he parts took an interurban train for Milwaukee.

As the automobile sped through Racine and into Evanston, Smith fled frantically, calling to pedestrians to come to his assistance. As a machine stopped at Evanston, a man pleaded with a crowd of bystanders to aid him, calling to them as he was being kidnapped.

With handcuffs holding both men together, Smith was about to step from the rear platform of the car as it was running fifty miles an hour toward Milwaukee, but was seized by Sheriff Torgerson. He fled the subterfuge that he wanted a drink of water and was left in his seat.

Smith Obtained About $40,000
The story of Smith's dealings with the Zeller brothers came to light a few weeks ago, after Smith had fled "camp" with upwards of $40,000.

BY CARL W. ACKERMAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
BERLIN, May 16.—(Via The Hague.) Germany's reply to the note will draw a distinct line between the Gulf light and the Lusitania incidents. It can be stated on the best authority that so far as the Gulf light is concerned, the reply will leave nothing to be desired by America. Every possible reparation will be offered in the hope of eliminating this incident from the controversy.

Neither American citizens here nor the German press expect that the German reply will be of a nature to precipitate a crisis. In the absence of even unofficial statements or discussion of the note at the German foreign office, the most interesting fact available is the obvious air of optimism, apparently based on the belief that America has not yet, but ultimately will, get and give consideration to Germany's point of view.

The apparent lack of resentment and the acceptance by the foreign office of America's protestation of friendship is reflected in the press, commenting on unofficial outlines of the note and coupled with regret that America does not recognize that Germany's submarine warfare against merchantmen is an act of self-defense against England's starvation assault on Germany's non-combatants. Abandonment by Germany of submarine warfare is not taken seriously here. Instead, Germany will endeavor, I am informed, to show America that the suggestion amounts to asking Germany to abandon her most effective weapon—one which may decide the ultimate issue for her rather than put American travelers to the inconvenience of using American ships only.

The situation here so far as Americans are concerned is calm. As unconsciously revealed about the foreign office the opinion seems to be that America, without being unfriendly to Germany, has been blind to the latitude allowed by the laws of self defense.

LISBON, May 17.—After two days of anarchy and fierce rioting, Portugal was nearly normal today. Dispatches reaching here said that the garrisons in Santarem and several cities surrendered to the revolutionary forces at midnight.

Dr. Manuel Arriaga, the president against whom the revolution was directed, has fled, and his whereabouts are unknown. A new cabinet of revolutionaries was formed last night aboard the battleship Vasco da Gama in Oporto harbor, and Joa Chagas, its prime minister and leader, is today on the way to Lisbon, having assumed control of the government.

Rebels Shelled Capital
Armed revolt broke out in Portugal Saturday when a rebel naval squadron bombarded Lisbon from the River Tagus. Many people were killed and wounded by the bombardment and Dr. Alfonso Costa, former premier, was assassinated in Lisbon.

Proclamation Is Issued
PARIS, May 17.—Havas dispatch from Lisbon contains the proclamation issued by the revolutionary committee in Lisbon. It says:

"We are going to restore the republic to the republicans. We demand a national government and consequently it ought to be republican. We shall adopt no party flag because we wish all republicans to be united for the dignity of the country and the salvation of the republic. We don't advise violence or reprisals. Our energy does not preclude generosity for the vanquished. It is the province of the national government alone to execute measures for patriotic defense. All may rely upon its honor to execute and its patriotism."

Dr. Manuel Arriaga, president of the republic, has gone to a suburb of Lisbon, escorted by a cavalry brigade. An official announcement said Dr. Arriaga has agreed to sign the nominations of the new cabinet and that he left the capital of his own volition. General Pimento Castro, deposed premier, could not be found today and the revolutionary leaders asserted he had fled the city.

More than 100 persons were killed.

GERMAN-AMERICANS PLEDGE AID

The White House Receives Many Letters and Telegrams Supporting the President's Position

WASHINGTON, May 17.—German received the Wilson protest against submarine war, as applied to merchant vessels, in the most friendly way. Her foreign minister treated Ambassador Gerard with the utmost courtesy and consideration when he read the American position, as set forth by the president. He promised that the note would have the most careful consideration and that a reply would be made without delay.

Ambassador Gerard, at Berlin, reported this to Secretary Bryan today. He emphasized the friendliness of his reception. Whether he intimated, however what he expected the outcome to be, Bryan refused to say. He refused to discuss the Gerard report in any way. Nevertheless his attitude showed he was in a far more hopeful frame of mind than at any previous time since the Lusitania was sunk.

German-Americans Promise Support
One of the most significant developments of the present situation is the deluge of the White house with letters and telegrams—many of them from prominent Americans of German lineage—pledging support of his policy, as enunciated in the latest note to the German government.

Over Sunday there was an accumulation, which, piled on a table, in general more than three feet high. In general all were identical. One, which was typical, was from the German Catholic union of Baltimore, representing 8,000 members. It endorsed the spirit of the president's note, and pledged "allegiance only to one flag," concluding with the statement that the organization was united in prayer that a peaceful solution might be reached.

Although the spirit of officialdom generally was hopeful of such an outcome, it is understood that both in the navy and war departments the fact that another result is possible is not overlooked.

Admiral Benson, new naval chief of staff, left for New York today, saying he would be back Tuesday. It is understood he will have a talk with Admiral Fletcher regarding the maneuvers that are to begin tomorrow.

To Try Out Defense
The fleet, on steaming outside of the Ambrose channel lightship, will commence a series of planned maneuvers which are intended to demonstrate.

Naval Parade

NEW YORK, May 17.—Voicing his and the nation's pride in the navy and its readiness to face and cope with responsibility, President Wilson today delivered a patriotic address at the Civic banquet, in his honor in connection with the review of the Atlantic fleet. He stirred an audience of 500 citizens and officers of the fleet into a wild tumult of applause.

"The interesting and inspiring thing about America is that she asks nothing for herself except what she has a right to ask for humanity," said the president. "We want no nation's property. We question no nation's honor."

"We stand for that for which every nation should wish to stand. When I think of the flag, the only touch of color about the fleet, it seems to me, I see alternate strips of parchment, on which are written right and justice; strips of blood spilt for maintaining these rights, and in the corner a strip of blue serene."

"The mission of America is the only thing a soldier or sailor should think about. He has nothing to do with her policy. He stands and waits to do the thing which the nation desires."

"America sometimes seems to forget her program or rather those who represent her do, but the people never forget. Their real affection and force is for the ideals that men embody."

"When a crisis comes in this country, it is as if you put your hands on the pulse of a dynamo."

"This spirit now broods over the river. No threat is lifted against any man or any nation. This is just evidence that the force of America is lifted for great moral principles. There is nothing else for which she will contend."

Rain continued to fall hard for about fifteen minutes after the president entered the reviewing stand. He stood out in front on the platform, with Acting Mayor McAneny at his right and Secretary of the Navy Daniels at his left. Every time an American flag came into sight in the parade the president tipped his hat and rain, dripping down from flags strung across the top of the platforms, splattered on his head.

The rain ceased, however, before the parade was finished. Both Secretary Daniels and Private Secretary Tumulty and other members of the party were thoroughly soaked.

The president took the keenest interest in the blue jackets. Despite the rain, his face beamed with smiles as the sailors marched by. His little grand niece, Ann Cöthran, stood with him during a part of the parade. His daughter Margaret was also with him.

Laughs at Goat
The battleship Florida's mascot—"Dynamite," a goat—drew a hearty laugh from the president. The goat trudged along with the blue jackets from the Florida.

A new ambulance carried for wounded or sick interested the president. When it went by he turned to Secretary Daniels and inquired about it, expressing his pleasure at its apparent value.

The battleship Louisiana's band played "Dixie" as it passed the stand and the president expressed his pleasure by clapping his hands vigorously. The crowd took it up and the band was given a big ovation.

Big Ovation
The review ended soon after 11 o'clock and the president went at

RUMOR OF TROOP MOVEMENTS

War Office Silent Concerning Reports of Big Advance Toward the Frontier

ROME, May 17.—Rome was tense with excitement today. An unconfirmed rumor said that an Austrian battalion has crossed the Italian frontier. The war office had no confirmation of the report. Premier Salandra is reported to have summoned the cabinet into an immediate session.

A band of Austrian raiders who crossed the Italian line were repulsed by a bayonet charge by Italian patrols, according to dispatches reaching here today.

ROME, May 17.—Italy is now definitely committed to a war policy, it is generally believed. Antonio Salandra having consented to retain the premiership, following several futile attempts to form a new ministry.

News Calms Riots

After a day of unprecedented rioting in the capital and in many other cities, rioting which led to fears of civil war, a sudden change came over the people as the news spread that Salandra would remain in power. As if obeying some secret sign the populace calmed down and the troops were withdrawn. The infuriated mobs seemed to disappear, and crowds passed the Austrian embassy without making any attempt at disturbance.

Efforts on the part of King Victor Emanuel to form new ministries were unsuccessful. Signor Marcora, president of the chamber of deputies, and Paolo Carcano, minister of the treasury in the Salandra cabinet, were successively approached by the king, but both refused the commission. The king then induced the Salandra ministry to remain in office.

Parliament Convoked

The king on Saturday signed a decree convoking the chamber of deputies early this week, according to reports from authoritative sources.

The mob spirit reached a stage of frenzy late Saturday and cavalry patrols were unable to break up the demonstrations. Newspaper announcements that Signor Marcora had refused to head a new cabinet created wild excitement and there were cries of:

"Down with the monarchy! Long live the republic!"

Cheer for War

Until an early hour today a crowd estimated at 100,000 surged about the royal palace, the war, and foreign offices and the residence of Premier Salandra, cheering wildly for war. The official announcement that King Victor Emanuel has refused to accept the resignation of the Salandra cabinet was everywhere interpreted to mean that the king has sanctioned the war program.

Gen. Cadorna, chief of staff and leader of the war party, was again in conference with the king today. There were wild rumors of important troop movements toward the Austrian frontier. Regarding these the war office remained silent. The exodus of Austrians and Germans from Italy continued today.

The decree, reported to have been signed by the king, convoking parliament into session earlier than the regular meeting date on Thursday, has not been promulgated. In government circles today it was stated that the king's decision to retain the Salandra cabinet had saved the situation by quelling disorders, and it is now possible that the chamber will not convene until Thursday.

Neutralists Still Hope

Neutralist party leaders today asserted that the retention of the Salandra cabinet does not necessarily mean war. They continued to express the hope that Austria will make further concessions that will bring peace at the eleventh hour. They admitted, however, that the demonstrations of the last three days have tended to solidify public sentiment behind the Salandra cabinet.

EL PASO, Texas, May 17.—Gen. Antonio Villa, brother of Francisco "Pancho" Villa, and Colonel Pulido of General Raoul Madero's staff, were killed in a quarrel at Chihuahua following a Mexican political argument last night. It was stated in dispatches received here today.

The TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

HENDRICK'S PLACE

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Evelyn Post turned away from the telephone and danced into the dining room, where her mother still lingered over a late breakfast.

"What do you think, mother?" Alice Beatty has just telephoned that they have arrived at Mill Hill for the season; they came last evening. She wants me to go over to luncheon and spend the day. We have thousands of things to talk over."

Mrs. Post smiled indulgently upon

"Who, who?" asked the owl.

Daddy's Bedtime

The Owl And the Parrot.

"DID I ever tell you about the funny talk between the owl and the parrot?" asked daddy.

"Oh, no, daddy?" cried the children.

"Well," laughed daddy, "it was very funny, I can tell you. The parrot was owned by a family in a small town near the seashore. Her name was Polly, which is the name that has been given to a great many parrots, I remember."

"She could say quite a number of words, as can many parrots, without knowing what they really meant, though sometimes it sounded as if she did. And that is the kind of a story that I am going to tell you."

"One day the man who owned the parrot received a big horned owl from a friend who had captured the bird up in some big woods and wished the parrot's owner to keep the owl for a few days. The owl came in a great big cage, which was set on the veranda near the perch upon which the parrot was stepping about."

"The owl didn't say anything for quite some time. He just scrooged all up to his cage and blinked his round yellow eyes that cannot see in the daytime and looked toward the parrot over his funny hooked bill that was like the nose of an old witch."

"The parrot looked at the owl, and she stepped around on her perch and ruffled her feathers, and after awhile she cried out, 'Pretty Polly!' just like that."

"And the owl cried 'Who? Who?' just like that."

"The parrot looked at the owl, and then she squawked, 'Polly wants a cracker!'"

"Who? Who?" asked the owl.

"Polly!" screamed the parrot at the very top of her voice.

"And the owl said 'Who? Who?' again, which so enraged Mistress Polly that she flew at him, with her feathers all ruffled up and squawking some words at the top of her voice which we won't put into this story because Polly had once belonged to a bold, bad sailor man and had learned some very shocking language."

"How the feathers did fly around there for a minute or two, but the owl wasn't the only one that was punished. Polly lost a few."

"But Polly was separated from the owl by her owner before she had an opportunity to do much harm."

"But now you must run along to bed," said daddy.

"It is unsafe to take the car

across the bridge, Miss Post," said the chauffeur patiently. "It is more than unsafe—it is foolhardy. If you will walk across, I will try and take the car over and then pick you up on the other side." He opened the door.

Evelyn flushed indignantly. It was too bad of Hendrick to take it for granted that she would follow his suggestion. She must put him in his place.

"I prefer to ride across," she said coldly. "Please make haste, Hendrick."

"You will take the risk of crashing through the bridge and losing our lives?" demanded Hendrick, bluntly.

"If you are afraid, Hendrick, I will drive the car myself," said Evelyn, with wonderful self-control. Hendrick would be discharged the instant they reached home—she would see about that.

"If you are afraid, Hendrick," Evelyn was repeating when the chauffeur leaned forward, deftly snatched her from the seat and ran across the bridge, holding her in his strong arms as if she had been a baby. She could feel his heart pounding beneath her hand. She hated him!

The bridge swayed a little under their united weights. They reached the other side and Hendrick dropped his burden and ran back to the car.

He leaped to his seat and started the machine across the bridge.

Evelyn, hating him with all her heart, saw the bridge quiver under the weight of the big car. She longed to cry out and send him back, but pride stifled the words on her lips.

The structure sagged when the car reached the middle.

There was a rending crash of timbers, and then a horrible thud from the river beneath. She saw the water boiling up through the jagged remains of the old bridge. The car and its driver had disappeared.

Half mad with terror and remorse, the girl ran to the edge of the bank and looked for Hendrick. The car was visible, half balanced on the big stones beneath the bridge. But the broken timbers of the bridge were heaped over it so that she could see no sign of the plucky chauffeur who had dared death to carry out her foolish orders.

"Hendrick!" she called frantically. "Hendrick, are you safe?"

There came back no reply; no sound save the on-rushing of the angry river.

Evelyn fell on her knees in the mud and offered a brief prayer. "O, God," she prayed, "save him for me."

She tossed aside her veil and hat and, crawled out on the jutting end of a girder, she looked down at the fallen motor car.

"Hendrick!" she called again, and her voice broke into sobs.

She fancied that some of the planks around the car moved; then a gloved hand was visible, then a shoulder, and at last Hendrick's pale face looking up at her from the heaped debris.

"Go back!" he ordered hoarsely. For answer Evelyn leaned over the abyss of boiling foam and stretched out a hand. "Let me help you—what can I do?" she called.

"Go back!" he repeated. "I am all right."

"You can do nothing alone," she protested. "Keep perfectly quiet and I will go for help—please keep still and let me do something for you."

"Very well," he agreed shortly. "Only make haste and get off that broken girder—go back cautiously, fix your eyes on shore and don't lose your nerve."

With encouraging words he cheered her way back along the dangerous strapping—a way which she had bravely trod a short while before in the great fear that he was forever lost.

Gaining the river bank, she tossed her long cloak aside and sped up the road toward the top of Mill Hill. It was a long stretch up to the gates of the Beatty place, unbroken by any other habitation. She feared that in her absence the rushing flood would dislodge the motor car from the rocks and send it over the falls below to certain destruction—with death to the chauffeur who had risked life to obey her whimsical orders; but, first Hendrick had carried her across the bridge to safety—he had seen to that.

Half sobbing now with remorse and fear for Hendrick's life, Evelyn panted up the hill and stumbled through the gate just as Mrs. Beatty came down the drive in her smart runabout.

There were hurried exclamations and questions, which Evelyn answered with what calmness she could muster. Then Alice Beatty issued a few orders and in ten minutes several men were racing down the long hill to the broken bridge.

Mrs. Beatty and Evelyn followed in the runabout.

When they reached the bridge it was to find the flood tearing at the splintered boards which had imprisoned Hendrick in the fallen motor car. The car was trembling with the impact of the rushing water and almost any moment it might slip from the rocks and go down stream.

The Beatty servants were quick-witted and trained to meet emergencies. Two of them tossed down a noosed rope to the chauffeur, who slipped it under his arms. Then, by main force they pulled.

When Hendrick reached the river bank he promptly lost consciousness. Bigley, the gardener, made a hasty examination and spoke to his mistress.

"He's hurt his head, I think ma'am. We better be taking him up to the house in the car."

"Of course," let Lake drive and, Bigley, you can hold the poor fellow. Be careful."

Evelyn turned her head that she might not see Hendrick's still, white face, stern even in its unconsciousness. Mrs. Beatty leaned forward

across the bridge, Miss Post," said the chauffeur patiently. "It is more than unsafe—it is foolhardy. If you will walk across, I will try and take the car over and then pick you up on the other side." He opened the door.

"Hendrick!" she called frantically. "Hendrick, are you safe?"

There came back no reply; no sound save the on-rushing of the angry river.

Evelyn fell on her knees in the mud and offered a brief prayer. "O, God," she prayed, "save him for me."

She tossed aside her veil and hat and, crawled out on the jutting end of a girder, she looked down at the fallen motor car.

"Hendrick!" she called again, and her voice broke into sobs.

She fancied that some of the planks around the car moved; then a gloved hand was visible, then a shoulder, and at last Hendrick's pale face looking up at her from the heaped debris.

"Go back!" he ordered hoarsely. For answer Evelyn leaned over the abyss of boiling foam and stretched out a hand. "Let me help you—what can I do?" she called.

"Go back!" he repeated. "I am all right."

"You can do nothing alone," she protested. "Keep perfectly quiet and I will go for help—please keep still and let me do something for you."

"Very well," he agreed shortly. "Only make haste and get off that broken girder—go back cautiously, fix your eyes on shore and don't lose your nerve."

With encouraging words he cheered her way back along the dangerous strapping—a way which she had bravely trod a short while before in the great fear that he was forever lost.

Gaining the river bank, she tossed her long cloak aside and sped up the road toward the top of Mill Hill. It was a long stretch up to the gates of the Beatty place, unbroken by any other habitation. She feared that in her absence the rushing flood would dislodge the motor car from the rocks and send it over the falls below to certain destruction—with death to the chauffeur who had risked life to obey her whimsical orders; but, first Hendrick had carried her across the bridge to safety—he had seen to that.

Half sobbing now with remorse and fear for Hendrick's life, Evelyn panted up the hill and stumbled through the gate just as Mrs. Beatty came down the drive in her smart runabout.

There were hurried exclamations and questions, which Evelyn answered with what calmness she could muster. Then Alice Beatty issued a few orders and in ten minutes several men were racing down the long hill to the broken bridge.

Mrs. Beatty and Evelyn followed in the runabout.

When they reached the bridge it was to find the flood tearing at the splintered boards which had imprisoned Hendrick in the fallen motor car. The car was trembling with the impact of the rushing water and almost any moment it might slip from the rocks and go down stream.

The Beatty servants were quick-witted and trained to meet emergencies. Two of them tossed down a noosed rope to the chauffeur, who slipped it under his arms. Then, by main force they pulled.

When Hendrick reached the river bank he promptly lost consciousness. Bigley, the gardener, made a hasty examination and spoke to his mistress.

"He's hurt his head, I think ma'am. We better be taking him up to the house in the car."

"Of course," let Lake drive and, Bigley, you can hold the poor fellow. Be careful."

Evelyn turned her head that she might not see Hendrick's still, white face, stern even in its unconsciousness. Mrs. Beatty leaned forward

across the bridge, Miss Post," said the chauffeur patiently. "It is more than unsafe—it is foolhardy. If you will walk across, I will try and take the car over and then pick you up on the other side." He opened the door.

Evelyn flushed indignantly. It was too bad of Hendrick to take it for granted that she would follow his suggestion. She must put him in his place.

"I prefer to ride across," she said coldly. "Please make haste, Hendrick."

"You will take the risk of crashing through the bridge and losing our lives?" demanded Hendrick, bluntly.

"If you are afraid, Hendrick, I will drive the car myself," said Evelyn, with wonderful self-control. Hendrick would be discharged the instant they reached home—she would see about that.

"If you are afraid, Hendrick," Evelyn was repeating when the chauffeur leaned forward, deftly snatched her from the seat and ran across the bridge, holding her in his strong arms as if she had been a baby. She could feel his heart pounding beneath her hand. She hated him!

The bridge swayed a little under their united weights. They reached the other side and Hendrick dropped his burden and ran back to the car.

He leaped to his seat and started the machine across the bridge.

Evelyn, hating him with all her heart, saw the bridge quiver under the weight of the big car. She longed to cry out and send him back, but pride stifled the words on her lips.

The structure sagged when the car reached the middle.

There was a rending crash of timbers, and then a horrible thud from the river beneath. She saw the water boiling up through the jagged remains of the old bridge. The car and its driver had disappeared.

Half mad with terror and remorse, the girl ran to the edge of the bank and looked for Hendrick. The car was visible, half balanced on the big stones beneath the bridge. But the broken timbers of the bridge were heaped over it so that she could see no sign of the plucky chauffeur who had dared death to carry out her foolish orders.

There came back no reply; no sound save the on-rushing of the angry river.

Evelyn fell on her knees in the mud and offered a brief prayer. "O, God," she prayed, "save him for me."

THE PRESIDENT'S VIEWPOINT

The attitude of the administration that, for the sake of peace, it will temporarily bear acts of belligerents which can humanely be compensated, but that it will not submit to acts of belligerents for which human redress is impossible, may be illustrated.

If a man proceeds to take your property from you, you can refuse to fight, and seek redress in the courts.

If a man proceeds to take your life, you can't wait to seek redress in the courts, for the courts cannot give redress to a dead man. The attack must cease or you must fight.

THE LAY OF THE LAND

Under the inspiration of temperate press comment in Germany and the hopeful tone of unofficial talk in German official circles, Washington has assumed a more optimistic air relating to the German controversy. To what extent this is justified can be known until the German reply to the American note is received.

The fullness with which President Wilson realized that his administration had taken a critical step is shown by the fact that he learned with relief that Ambassador Gerard had not been handed his passports immediately upon presentation of the note to the German foreign office.

In Washington hope of an amicable outcome is based upon two things: the German hint as to arbitration, and the suggestion that, while omitting a specific promise to abandon submarine attacks on merchant vessels, Germany will give the desired guarantee of American safety, and will make good.

While arbitration may take care of the Lusitania and other cases of injury to Americans, the president's demand that Germany give assurance that they will not be repeated does not seem a subject for arbitration, for the reason that there is nothing to arbitrate. That question is not one of law or of fact, or even of equity; it is the question of a nation's intent. Certainly Germany, and not a board of arbitration, must decide whether Germany will or will not make the desired promise.

It would be easier for Germany to guarantee safety to Americans had not the American note suggested the abandonment of submarine warfare on merchantmen. Had the reference been omitted, Germany might have given the guarantee of safety and then quietly dropped the policy of torpedoing vessels without warning, and passenger boats at all. For her to abandon the submarine campaign in acquiescence to what has been interpreted as a specific American demand that she do so, will be more damaging to her pride. Still, in view of the fact that the submarine campaign has been but an annoyance rather than a serious interruption of British commerce, the emperor may yield.

That is the sunny side of the situation, which at present is "sunny side up." However, let us not deceive ourselves. The relations of the United States and Germany are still more than ticklish. There is a definiteness and finality in the American note which leave little latitude for bargaining, and it is the evident intention of the president that the answer shall not beg the question.

IN TERMS OF CIVIL LAW

The civil law holds that a man who, while engaging in an illegal act, unintentionally destroys a life, is guilty of murder or manslaughter.

The civil law takes no account of the provocation for the illegal act. It is enough that the act was illegal and death the consequence.

Is there an analogy in the law of nations?

CONSIDERING CITIZENSHIP

The time has come for the people of the United States to consider their citizenship—its character, duties and responsibilities. We are a national of all nations, a composite of racial ingredients in various stages of assimilation, among whom there remain blood ties that, as between the European belligerents, bind many of us in interest and sympathy to one or another of the parent commonwealths. But by birth or oath we are Americans, where the interests of the United States are concerned bound by the highest human obligation to the stars and stripes.

Our government is a voluntary organization of the people for protection and mutual advantage. In all things ultimate authority rests with the citizens. Citizenship is inherited by birth, or conferred by a process of naturalization.

Our government, as authorized by the citizens, undertakes to effectuate the preamble of our national constitution, to ..... establish justice, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to all citizens alike.

These are the duties of government, but the citizen in return owes government compensatory service. That service is founded in loyalty. The citizen must pay taxes to maintain the institutions and agencies of government through the activities of which he enjoys security, freedom and opportunity. He is called upon to participate in the act of government by exercising the franchise. In ordinary times the mere existence of the government safeguards him, and no further service than the above is exacted of the citizen. But there arise emergencies in which, to secure the very existence of government, and to preserve that dignity and prestige without which government would cease to be the citizens bulwark of security, the citizen must pay for his enjoyment of its privileges by coming personally to its support. He must defend it by word and deed, and stand ready to surrender his property and risk his life in its behalf. Thus the philosophy of government moves in a circle, for it is the ever readiness of the citizen to defend his country, his government, that enables his government to protect the citizen. Certain, then, that the vital, sustaining characteristic which gives force and meaning to citizenship is patriotism.

The American commonwealth is a government "of the people" and "by the people" as well as "for the people." Administrations are established and discarded by popular vote. Hence in the United States there is a freedom of speech greater than in most governments, for it is in free speech and open debate that public opinion is formed and citizens prepare themselves for the ballot.

Necessarily free speech includes the right of the citizen to differ with administrations and to adversely criticize the government, nor is such right to criticize limited to domestic affairs. The American citizen may assail the position of the administration with relation to foreign concerns, even in time of war.

But the American citizen MUST NOT mistake open defense of a foreign nation with which his country is, or seems likely to be at war, as a part of free speech. He may question his country's policy, but he must not place himself in alignment against her. He may argue against war, or for the restoration of peace, but always as a loyal son contending for the nation's good, never as a partisan or sympathizer of her opponents. The citizen worthy of a nation's respect and confidence submerges his private views and accepts his country's issue as his own the instant the government's decision is made and the die is cast.

A foreign war is in progress. If we go back far enough, all of us are of European derivation. Natural, then, that in this melting pot of the peoples citizens have taken sides with one or another of the warring nations. Natural, too, that we have not been in unanimous agreement as to the fairness of our government's administration of matters in relation to which we have stood as a neutral factor between the belligerents. Natural, and honorable insofar as we have been governed by conviction rather than prejudice.

But when out of the conflict there arose a quarrel between the United States and one of the belligerent nations, we found ourselves in a new

Give Them Help and Many La Crosse People Will be Happier

"Throw Out the Life Line."—Weak kidneys need help.

They're often overworked—they don't get the poison filtered out of the blood.

Will you help them?

Doan's Kidney Pills have brought benefit to thousands of kidney sufferers.

La Crosse testimony proves their worth.

Mrs. Anna N. Hoff, 1307 Winnebago street, La Crosse, says: "I had hard, dull backaches, with pains in my kidneys and through my hips and sides. The pains were so severe at times that I couldn't stand up. The trouble was brought on by overwork. A friend told me about Doan's Kidney Pills and I began using them. I was cured of all the ailments. Should I ever need any kidney medicine again, I would certainly use Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hoff had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Rheumatism? Here Are Some Real Facts

How to Overcome the Torture Without Harmful Drugs.

A legion of people have used S. S. S. and have overcome the worst forms of rheumatism.

This disease of the blood is little understood because of its strange symptoms, scarcely two people having it exactly alike. And yet, no matter what its form or how painful and distressing, S. S. S. seems to have almost a divine influence in driving it out, releasing the nerves from pain and clearing the joints and muscles so they work without restraint. The best explanation for this happy result is the fact that in S. S. S. are certain ingredients which act as an antidote. They are nature's providence to man.

Just as the meats, fats, salts and sugars of our daily food provide us with nourishment, so does S. S. S. give to the blood the exact medicinal requirement to clear the stream, drive out impurities and reconstruct the body if destructive germs have gained a foothold. Go to any drug store today and get a bottle of S. S. S. It will do you good. But be sure to refuse any and all substitutes. And if yours is a stubborn case, write to the Medical Adviser, The Swift Specific Co., 109 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. situation. For a citizen of the United States to take sides with Germany against England, or vice versa, was one thing; for a citizen of the United States to take sides with Germany against the United States is quite another. It smacks of sedition and is the parent of treason.

The story of a young man who, occupying a position of trust in this city, pasted the story relating the drowning of two hundred American citizens by a German submarine, on a flapole, cheering and hooting der kaiser, gives force to the warning that the instant Woodrow Wilson made a definite demand upon the German government, every citizen of the United States was committed to that demand with his life. To this man, and to others like him, we commend these words uttered upon that very occasion by the editor of the New York Staats Zeitung, Herman Ridder:

There has never been but one flag under which the German-American has fought. There never can be but one flag under which we will ever fight. And that flag is the Stars and Stripes.

Two men quarrel. In violation of law, each draws a weapon. As they are about to fire one sees the wife and daughters of a friendly neighbor come into range.

What will that man do?

He is very sure of his aim; he fires. His bullet wounds his assailant, but goes further and kills one of his neighbor's daughters.

His assailant continues to fire. The women are still in range.

Evidence of It

Little 4-year-old Harry was not feeling well, and his father suggested that he might be taking the chicken pox, then prevalent.

Harry went to bed laughing, but early next morning he came down stairs looking very serious, and said: "You're right papa, it is chicken pox, 'cos I's found a fever in the bed."

THE RED MIRAGE

"That sounds quite eastern." He was a mere boy fresh from St. Cyr, and this woman whom he held in his arms seemed to him the most radiant, perfect thing he had ever known. He bent over her, his face flushed with young trembling infatuation. "How splendid you are," he murmured, "brave and beautiful! My God, how I envy that man—dying perhaps for you out there in the desert."

"Isn't it better to dance for me here?" she interrupted gaily.

"It is paradise." He swung her clear of a wildly pirouetting couple of dominos, and as they flashed from the light into the shadows he brushed her forehead with his lips.

"Forgive me—don't be angry—it's Masquerade—all things are forgiven on this one night. Say you're not angry?"

He was incoherent, a trifle foolish-looking with his boy's face framed in a ludicrous, red Mephistopheles cap, but she looked up at him from under the shadowy lashes—without anger and without amusement.

"You are foolish," she said a little breathlessly. "You mustn't do that sort of thing; but I forgive you because nothing matters tonight—and because you dance so beautifully. You must promise to behave."

"Oh, I promise!" He whirled her round faster, triumphant with flattered energy, and as they brushed the balustrade of the veranda he bent and whispered laughingly into her ears. "Look at that queer old lady with the white wig! Is she a masquerade? And that funny, gray little thing beside her! I call them the Proprietaries. What are they doing here?"

"How should I know?" Sylvia returned with sudden impatience.

As they passed on Mrs. Farquhar turned and touched Gabrielle on the arm.

"Sylvia has just seen us," she said. "I have spoiled the evening for her. It was worth while coming. She tried to laugh at me with that young fool, but she couldn't. She is beginning to be afraid. If Richard dies I shall haunt her till she goes mad."

She laughed softly to herself, and there was something in that subdued merriment which harmonized with the painted powdered face, the whole artificiality of her appearance, and yet remained very terrible. Gabrielle's grave eyes followed the red and gold figure of Carmen through the maze of fantastic dancers.

"How you hate her!" she said almost pittingly.

"Yes, I hate her." The heavily jeweled hand resting on the arm of the chair was clenched. "I hate her more than you do because I understand her. I understand the comedy she had played. Though I do not know the details, I know that she has ruined my son. I hate her instinctively, and instinctive hatred has no mercy." She got up suddenly. "Take me away from here," she said, with a poignant change of voice.

"Take me away—out into the garden—I can not rest. I feel that we shall know tonight—that the certainty is coming. Give me your arm." She looked intently at the composed profile of the woman beside her. "Do you believe in Richard?" she asked abruptly and wistfully.

"Yes." "He left me without a word. That was rather cruel. He has accused himself of dishonor. Do you believe him?"

"I believe him to be honorable." "As I do. And he is my son. I love him." She nodded to herself. "What is it St. Paul or somebody says—'There is no fear in love.' You love my son, Gabrielle Smith?"

They had passed through the hotel archway into the gardens. Beyond the long lines of gay painted lanterns they could see the faces of the idly moving crowd. A Jewish woman selling flowers came down the pathway and glided into the courtyard. There was music in the air—music woven through laughter and the murmur of many tongues.

"If I do, it's against all reason," Gabrielle answered, with a touch of her old dryness. "He has always been rather rude—except once when he was delirious. And once he was drunk."

"You saved his life," Mrs. Farquhar said tranquilly. "Women are bound by a law of nature to love the things they save. That is how I knew."

The little woman drew herself up,

HIGH PRICES KILLED Beware of Cheap Prices

The General says: When we entered the field the price of good roofing was too high. With our big mills, enormous output and modern selling methods we can sell the best roofing at a reasonable price. This has been done to such a great extent that high prices have been killed. Now you get the highest quality at a reasonable price when you buy

Certain-teed

Roofing

But there is another great danger. Unknown goods with unknown brands and unknown qualities are being offered at prices that are too cheap for safety. It's a long, long chance you take when you buy these cheap goods. Avoid the temptation of cheap prices as well as high prices. Know that the company whose name appears on the goods has the ability to make a good quality roofing at a reasonable price, and that it is guaranteed by them to be the best roofing possible to make; that the company does not sell anything at a higher price, and that the price at which it is offered to you is a reasonable but not a cheap price.

Certain-teed Roofing is guaranteed 5, 10 or 15 years, according to whether the thickness is 1, 2 or 3 ply respectively, and remember this guarantee is backed by the largest mills in the roofing and building paper industry. Ask your dealer for these goods, and be sure they bear our label. The price will be reasonable.

"It need not make you afraid," she said, in her quiet low-pitched voice. "I shall always be glad that I cared—that I could save so much—and that in the bad hours I was his friend. It will be something beautiful to take with me on my way. But when your son is safe—I shall go out of his life—back into my own—"

"To your people?"

"No."

"They will forgive."

"I know. That is why I shall never go back. I have forgiven myself. It's the only forgiveness I need."

"Is it to be 'Gabrielle Smith' to the end?"

She nodded, and a sudden light flashed into her eyes and into the level voice.

"The woman who was wrapped up in the lies and humbug of the parasite-woman's life went to the bottom," she said. "Gabrielle Smith, the outcast, fought her way to the surface. I prefer her. I shall stand by her—as you say, to the end."

And suddenly the jeweled hand resting on her arm tightened, and she looked down and in the light of an over-hanging lantern saw the faded beautiful eyes raised to hers in mute, proudly suppressed suffering.

"Mrs. Farquhar!" she said, amazed.

"I am not afraid, Gabrielle Smith," was the broken answer, "not afraid of you or your love—only that my son may be dead out there in the desert, and that it may be too late. What do I care for honor?"

ATTORNEY DISBARRED

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 17.—David E. Johnson, a local attorney, was disbarred on Saturday on six charges, among which was the embezzlement of the funds of clients. The charges were filed last July by the grievance committee of the Milwaukee Bar association. The decision was rendered by Judge E. B. Belden of Racine. Johnson was defended by Attorney Lester C. Manson, while Attorney Mortimer E. Walker of Racine, representing the prosecution.

CHARITY WORKERS HOLD CONVENTION

"Convict Camp in the South" Is the Title of the Opening Address

BALTIMORE, Md., May 17.—Before a notable gathering of charity workers, philanthropists, physicians and institutional directors at the annual conference of charity and correction workers in session in this city, Julian Wilson of Washington, D. C., delivered an address on "Convict Camps in the South." Mr. Wilson said in part:

"That treatment of the convict which takes into account both humanitarian and economic considerations is most desirable. Unfortunately, the subject has been too frequently approached from one of these standpoints without regard to the other. Those who have striven for conditions which would best promote the physical comfort and the mental and moral uplift of the convict have in some measure disregarded the right of society to lighten its burden by utilizing its criminal population along economically sound lines.

"I am not entirely in accord with the theory that the criminal is merely a weaker brother whose treatment must look to his benefit rather than to that of society. On the other hand, I fully realize that the old conception of punishment and repression as essentials to the handling of the convict question is clearly wrong.

"The convict is entitled to humane and considerate treatment. He should have healthful, invigorating environment and the opportunity to develop his mental and moral being. In other words, there is, to my mind, a sensible middle ground between the somewhat sentimental 'fallen brother' attitude on the one hand and the brutal domination of the lash and chains on the other.

"The leasing of convicts by the state to private interests has been condemned almost universally as against the dictates of humanity and as open to the gravest abuses. I am glad to say, that with a few exceptions, this system has been abolished in the southern states, but I think it is no more than just that we should consider that in the treatment of prisoners nearly all nations of the world have been passing through a process of evolution just as in all other lines of human progress.

"The lease system, iniquitous though it be, represents simply a stage in that evolution which has characterized the treatment of the criminal classes. In fact it was an actual advance over the old systems of solitary confinement with the accompanying paraphernalia of discipline and torture.

"Throughout the southern states guarded camps are the rule rather than the exception, in contrast to the practice followed in some of the far western states and to a limited extent in the eastern states of maintaining what are known as honor camps. The practice is quite general, however, of rewarding the most trustworthy convicts by giving them a certain measure of liberty, designating them as trustees and allotting to them lighter tasks than are allotted to the gunmen."

Bleeker Van Wageningen, of the New Jersey Training school at Vineland, N. J., read a paper on the "Prevention of Feeble-mindedness." He said in part:

"It is my purpose in this paper to show that while enough about feeble-mindedness is definitely known to make it possible to organize a campaign on a wide scale for the enlightenment of the people everywhere regarding its prevalence, its burden and its dangers, with recommendations of specific plans for the care and treatment of the feeble-minded, looking toward prevention, we do not yet know enough of causes, complexes, methods of identification, remedial possibilities, means of prevention, etc., to enable us to see the way to the practical elimination of feeble-mindedness, which is the goal set before us.

"Feeble-mindedness has many ramifications. It is inextricably inter-twined with all our social and educational problems. It has engaged the study of investigators in many branches of science. Biologists and psychologists, anatomists and physiologists, pathologists and psychiatrists, biochemists and medical research doctors, criminologists, statisticians and lawyers have all contributed to the literature of the subject, which is already extensive and growing rapidly.

"The reading of a variety of this literature, in the endeavor to be eclectic, tends towards confusion of mind. Much of it is controversial. Much of it is evidently hypothetical. Some is dogmatic, some tentative, some suggests practical applications, some offers fanciful theories. On the whole, however, it embodies the record of a great advance in scientific knowledge and offers confident expectations of still greater developments to come."

To Be Lived Through.
Life has been good to me, and as I look back upon it no one thing seems more precious than the thought that I have been much trusted with deep things in the lives of other men and women. Next to living great things for one's self (we learn by and by to put that aside) it is wonderful to be lived through. It is wonderful to know a human soul and ask nothing of it save its utter confidence. From "Hempfield" by David Grayson in the American Magazine.

Education.
Education is a nation's best investment, since it is in and through its educational system that a nation finds and expresses itself.—Charles Cullen.

MANY BAG PIPES MADE FOR ARMY

Scotch Factories Work Overtime to Supply "Pipes" for Marching Soldiers

LONDON, April 28.—(By Mail to New York.)—For the first time in history, Scottish bagpipe factories are working night and day, according to word from Glasgow.

It is not only the Scottish regiments that march to the battlefields behind the pipes. English, Irish and even the Indian regiments have caught the "pipe craze" until now it is estimated that 10,000 pipes are playing "Johnny Cope" every morning in Britain, at sea or in France and the demand for the instrument exceeds the supply.

The instruments cost from $35 to $45.

Raw Cabbage to Aid Digestion.
Raw cabbage, eaten without any dressing or with salt, olive oil and lemon juice, is recommended by many physicians as an aid to digestion. If the cabbage is cut in thin strips and laid in very cold, slightly salted water for a few minutes before serving it will be crisper and of better flavor.

Baby's Happiness Depends on Health

Cross, fretful babies usually need a laxative to make them comfortable, and comfort begets happiness. Constipation is the cause of much discomfort. Mothers should watch closely the condition of their children's bowels and see that they are regular.

A mild, pleasant tasting laxative such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is ideal for children because of its natural composition and gentle action, and because it contains no opiate, narcotic or other harmful habit-forming drug. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere. A teaspoonful at bedtime will bring easy, certain relief.

A free trial bottle can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

MAY MAKE SCHOOLS EXTENSION CENTERS

MADISON, Wis., May 17.—A plan to make high schools local extension centers has been maturing at the University of Wisconsin and is now announced for the fall of this year. This plan will be put into operation in connection with the educational service of motion picture and stereopticon slides inaugurated last fall by the bureau of visual instruction of the extension division. By means of this service films and slides have been sent out to about 230 communities, and 100,000 feet of film and about 15,000 slides have been used.

When the schedules were announced at the beginning of last year, when the work was greatly expanded over previous years, it was decided to allow a set of films and slides to remain in a community two days. It was found, however, that such a schedule allowed no time for extra lectures or demonstrations to be given, and that sometimes the time limit was too short for satisfactory and reliable transportation facilities. At the same time a number of institutions taking the service found a demand in the outlying districts, and made arrangements for special sets of films and lectures to be furnished. From the local high school, or normal, or small college short lecture schedules were arranged, and thus the movement was started.

Laughter.

An old writer, John Bulwer, in his "Pathomyotomia" (1649), says: "But true laughter hath both the effects of the intellectual part as the principle upon which the dilatation of the heart and contraction of the countenance ensue, it being not only an affection of the body, but totius conjuncti of the whole man."

HISTORY OF WHEAT MARKET IS VARIED

Is Romance and Tragedy with Scenes of Elation and Many Suicides

CHICAGO, May 17.—The romance and tragedy of the people's bread-stuff in the last fifty years is a story of fortunes made and lost; of speculation and suicide, with the innocent consumer always paying the freight. Some times the grower benefitted, sometimes not.

The rapid and sensational advance in wheat prices has followed the war recalled to Chicago traders other wheat marks in years gone by. During the civil war wheat at one time sold for $2.25 in the Chicago grain market, while on the seaboard it could not be purchased cheaper than $3 gold. The prices forced by the war lasted until 1867. From that time to 1882, wheat sold above $1 every year. In the last 20 years, wheat brought above $1 in eleven years—not continuously, but at times.

In 1872, the Franco-Prussian war, either by demand or speculation, forced wheat to $1.61. Three years prior to that, September wheat was cornered. No one now in the Chicago trade remembers just who did it, but records show that this corner sent wheat to $2.47 per bushel.

The most noted corners of the last 30 years were those engineered by E. J. Harper, B. P. Hutchinson, "Joe" Leiter and James A. Patten.

Harper's corner in 1887 took wheat to $1.16, when the corner collapsed and sent banks and speculators tottering. "Old Hutch," now dead, one of the most spectacular of the old time traders, engineered his corner in 1888. It sent wheat to $2 a bushel. There was no serious attempt after that to corner wheat until 1898, when "Joe" Leiter tried. He put May up to $1.85, made millions, and then tried to switch his corner to June and thereby lost a sum that he himself testified a few weeks ago totaled $11,000,000. His father's estate, that of Levi Leiter, merchant prince, came to his aid and in later years Leiter recouped all his losses—but not in the grain pit.

Patten More Famous

The latest corner in 1909 was engineered by James A. Patten, Chicago tharar, and Patten is believed to have cleared millions, how many not even his brokers ever knew. The record price in his coup was $1.60. For two months after he closed his corner, cash wheat sold higher than the futures.

Patten ostensibly retired a few years ago and lives in a palace at Evanston, Ill. His gifts to colleges, hospitals and private charities total millions. The magnificent gymnasium at Northwestern university, Methodist institution at Evanston, was Patten's gift and bear his name. While Patten is "officially" retired, he maintains an office and is usually there when there is a "hen on" in the grain pit and frequently takes a mere matter of a few hundred of thousands. Patten's friends say that all his winnings in the wheat pit now go to charity.

ZEPPELIN HURLS
TWENTY BOMBSON ENGLISH COAST

Several Persons Injured by Explosives Dropped on the City of Ramsgate

LONDON, May 17.—In a spectacular battle far above the clouds over the English channel, eight naval aviators from the Dunkirk station attacked and severely damaged one of the Zeppelins that bombarded English coast towns early today.

Official dispatches to the admiralty brought word of the thrilling air fight. The aviators, it was officially announced, were subjected to heavy fire from the ship's machine guns, but escaped without casualties.

Three aviators closed in about the Zeppelins, firing at close range. Two others tilted into the clouds until they were indirectly over the big dirigible which spent eastward at forty miles an hour.

The aviators above began dropping bombs at the Zeppelin from a height of 200 feet. One bomb crashed through the huge bag and almost immediately a large column of smoke arose through the clouds. The crew of the dirigible quickly began throwing out bags of ballast and she rose to a height of 11,000 feet, tail downward and apparently drifting helplessly high in the clouds.

LONDON, May 17.—Twenty bombs were dropped, injuring several persons but doing slight property damage, in a midnight raid along the English coast by two Zeppelins. The bombs were dropped at Ramsgate. The dirigibles passed over Margate and Dover without throwing any explosives.

The admiralty today announced that it has good reason to believe the Zeppelin that raided Ramsgate early today has been "severely damaged."

The Zeppelin that attacked Ramsgate, southeast of London, evidently was bent on the destruction of the shipping lying near the Goodwin sands, off the downs. It sped in over Margate but did not open its bombardment until it reached Ramsgate. One bomb crashed through the roof of the Bull and Bear hotel in Ramsgate.

Three guests were injured and the building partially destroyed by fire. Another bomb partially wrecked a shop in Albion Hill and two others exploded harmlessly in the city park. The Zeppelin that passed over Dover dropped no bombs on the city. Skippers of vessels lying in the harbor said they believed several bombs were tossed at their vessels but none of them reached the mark.

Excitement of the Zeppelin was heightened when a Cardiff steamer arrived off the Downs at 3 a. m. with word that five Zeppelins were heading toward the coast. The entire population of Deal was aroused and crowded the streets to await the enemy airships. Shopkeepers placed tables in the streets and did a rushing business in tea and cigarettes until daylight. The Zeppelin fleet failed to appear.

Many a man who takes himself seriously is considered a joke by others.

La Crosse Plow Works Celebrates Fiftieth Anniversary Today

A. HIRSCHHEIMER
President and founder of the La Crosse Plow Company of which today is the Fiftieth Anniversary.

H. J. HIRSCHHEIMER
Vice-President of the La Crosse Plow Company

L. C. HIRSCHHEIMER
Secretary of the La Crosse Plow Company

In honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the La Crosse Plow company's works in this city there was a pleasant celebration at the plant this morning, and this afternoon the employees are making holiday on full pay.

Shortly before noon the employees assembled and listened to addresses by L. N. Eckland, a pioneer plowmaker, and Supt. Harry Montfort. Mr. A. Hirschheimer, pioneer and founder of the business, then spoke pleasantly to his helpers, and was followed by his business associates, his sons, H. J. Hirschheimer and L. C. Hirschheimer. There was a note of friendship and familiarity in the relations between the entire force, from president down, which left a pleasant impression.

A. Hirschheimer, then ten years of age, came to this country with his father and became a resident of Blairsville, Pa., July 1, 1850, and on April 17, 1856, the family moved to La Crosse. Mr. Hirschheimer was variously engaged until 1865, on May 17 of which year he entered the business of manufacturing plows in a building at Front and State streets, the site of the present Funke Candy factory.

The original shop on North Third street, the present location, was built in 1869, forty-six years ago, and about that modest foundry the present splendid plant has been constructed.

The firm, as now constituted, was incorporated in 1893. George B. Rose, the jeweler, is the only man now in business in La Crosse who was established in business when the Hirschheimer works were begun fifty years ago today.

BRYAN HOPEFUL AFTER READING ENVOY'S WORDS

onstrate whether New York would be safe in the event of attack by a hostile fleet. It will be possible to keep the fleet together in this movement and it will also be possible for its whereabouts to be concealed until the German reply has been received and considered here. This would be a decided advantage to any nation at the present time, officials admit.

Ammunition on Call
The ordnance departments of both branches of the service already have reported the exact condition of the army and navy concerning munitions. These reports are admittedly none too rosy, but with all of the ammunition factories in the country running full blast, if the government needs ammunition, it was said they would be promptly commandeered.

Germany's reply to President Wilson's note may reach Washington Tuesday or Wednesday.

Unofficial intimations reached here today that the German foreign office intends to expedite its preparation. It is understood that copies of the president's "last word" on submarine warfare already are in the hands of the kaiser and his chief advisers.

Most of the points raised have already been considered by German diplomacy at various times recently. The new matter, the peremptory demand for recognition of American citizens' right to travel wherever they will, safe under their government's protection, is admittedly Germany's own position. Germany, however, has made the exception, and is expected to do so in this case, that all persons entering belligerent territory put themselves in the position of assuming a risk that their own government cannot properly safeguard them against.

Note Amazes Germany
The state department professes to be in the dark, but there is not a European embassy or legation which has not received complete reports of the German official attitude toward the United States. All agree that German officials were amazed when they received the American note, giving them practically no choice of decision on the main question at issue.

Germany, it is said in diplomatic circles, expects a protest concerning the Lusitania. She realized that one was being prepared in the Falaba case involving the death of the American, Leon Thrasher. The kaiser was understood to stand ready to disavow the Cushing and Gulfright incidents and not only that but to give indemnity.

President Wilson's tart assertion that the Lusitania sinking was a crime coupled with the demand that the submarine warfare be ended forthwith came, however, as an unpleasant surprise, diplomats say. They assert that Germany is, nevertheless, as anxious today to conciliate the United States as she was ten days ago—possibly more so, because of developments in Italy.

To Accept Spirit of Demands
For this reason it is expected the Berlin government will accept, in spirit at least, the undebatable sections of the president's note—even to the extent temporarily of halting her submarine activities against merchant vessels—and then to seek a ground of amicable final settlement that will benefit Germany.

Flat statement that questions of national honor cannot be arbitrated are of course accepted in diplomatic quarters and this, too, in the face of the fact that the Bryan arbitration treaties make no such exception, but it is pointed out that the only points in the Wilson note which can be construed as involving points of national honor are the killing of American citizens and the assertion of their right to travel wherever they please.

Germany, officials say, has already apologized for the death of the Americans on the Lusitania. She can be expected to accept in principle the policy of freedom to travel. In both cases, however, she can plead—not exactly in justification, but rather in extenuation—that the Falaba, on which Thrasher lost his life, was admittedly carrying tons of munitions to the allies, and that the Lusitania, on previous trips, carried big cargoes of munitions, while on the voyage on which she was destroyed, she carried many reservists on their way to join the colors.

May Protest Travel With Munitions
Accepting the principles enunciated by President Wilson—and there is not a single individual in Washington, American official or foreign diplomatic circles who does not agree that she must either accept them, in effect at least, or accept a break that may have far reaching consequences—Germany will then be in a position to suggest that there may be instances where the premises alleged do not apply. This will be in cases where Americans travel on armed merchantmen carrying tons of munitions.

Germany offered long ago to end her submarine blockade if the British embargo was lifted on foodstuffs shipments to Germany. The United States sent a note to Great Britain refusing to accept the British order in council as final. That matter is one of the many still hanging fire, inasmuch as England, in discussing the German offer, told the United States that she did not find in the German note the promise which Germany said was in it.

The United States, diplomats say, could very easily reopen the order in council matters on its own volition if Germany proves her friendliness by accepting the American demands at this time.

U. S. Can Check Sailings

There is not the slightest doubt that Germany will ask this government to prevent passengers from being carried on merchant vessels whose holds are filled with ammunition, if the present difficulties are smoothed over. The United States could accomplish this by refusing clearance to vessels carrying passengers and absolute contraband. Under the neutrality law, passed in the closing session of the last congress, the government has arbitrary powers along this line.

With President Wilson in New York at the fleet review Secretary Bryan was sitting on the diplomatic lid. He said that he had received no hint from Berlin what to expect or when to look for the answer. Reports that the reply would be expedited greatly interested him, but he declined to discuss them.

LAGRESSENT ROAD AGAIN CONDEMNED BY AUTO TOURISTS

Only Three Miles Out of

That the fifty miles of the "Great Lakes to Puget Sound highway" extending from La Crosse to St.
Charles, Minn., is in perfect condition with the exception of three miles, is the report which John George Wehaupt, who made the trip yesterday, will forward to the offices of the highway association at Spokane, Wash.

"Although the rain made the road slippery in places, we had good going all the way," said Mr. Wehaupt today. "Myself and party left La Crosse about 7 o'clock in the morning. The road from the western side of the Mississippi to the top of South Ridge, Minn., we found in bad condition, but the balance of the road was good, and needs no repairing."

Mr. Wehaupt's completion of the La Crosse lap yesterday, furnished inspection of the route which will carry thousands of auto parties from Chicago and eastern cities who will visit the Pacific coast this summer.

CHURCH AND TIMES MUST BE TOGETHER SAYS BISHOP HERE

Frank M. Bristol, Head of World's Epworth League, Talks for Modernizing
the Church

"Methodists must be up to date and abreast of the times, if we expect to interest the young people in church and religion," said Bishop Frank M. Bristol, D. D., L. L. D., last evening before the combined Epworth leagues of the city at the First German Methodist church, the occasion of the twenty-eighth anniversary of the establishment of the chapter of the Epworth league in that church. Bishop Bristol is president of the Epworth leagues of the world.

"The old time religion may be good enough for some people," he said, "but not for me. We should have the latest and best, as religion develops and does not stand still.
The only reason why we are happier and more prosperous than the Greeks at their best is not our superior knowledge and wisdom, but religion, the difference being in the soul, the real source of happiness."

"Values increase directly through confidence founded in civilization, religion being the foundation of all."
Much of Bishop Bristol's address was based on the work of the Epworth leagues throughout the world which together constitute one of the largest religious auxiliary societies.

C. R. Bearmore and James R.
Kerr sang at the evening service, the Wesleyan Male chorus accompanying.
Bishop Bristol's sermon at the forenoon service was "The Pearl of Great Price," a discourse on the Christian Life.

Other promises have been made and it is expected that the school will soon have a large library of records for its new Victrola.

DAVID TIPTON AT WORK

Buoys and river channel lights are today being placed in the Mississippi in the vicinity of La Crosse by the government steamer David Tipton.
The steamer is making its annual up-river journey, which is the official signal for opening river navigation.

MADGE PAISLEY IS THE BEST SPELLER AT SALEM MEET

Farmington Young Woman
Will Compete with Best Spellers of Northwest at Milwaukee Fair

WEST SALEM, Wis., May 17.— (Special.)—When the spellers of the great northwest assembled at the Wisconsin state fair at Milwaukee next fall, Miss Madge Paisley, Farmington, will compete with them, because she won the La Crosse county spelling contest at West Salem Saturday with only one mistake out of 125 words. She will visit the fair as a trip to Minneapolis was designated as first prize.

Other prizes were won by Luella
C. Casberg, Halmen; Katie Morgan-dant, Bangor; Elroy Lemke, Greenfield, and Ruth Schaller of Burrus.
La Crosse was not represented in the "bee."

The contest was held at the Congregational church under the auspices of B. F. Ottman, county superintendent of schools.

The first prize in the declamatory contest, held in connection with the spelling contest, was won by Winnie Halderson, Holland. Others winning were Dorothy Jones, Bangor; Della Deen, Dieffenhafer, West Salem; Irma Jewell, Farmington, and Rosella Betz of Shelby.

WOODMEN FIGHT AGAIN RENEWED

MADISON, Wis., May 17.—Members of fraternal societies are greatly stirred up over the threatened passage of a bill in the assembly which in practical effect would repeal all Wisconsin laws to regulate fraternal societies or protect their members. No one appeared for the bill before the committee on municipalities and it was opposed by members of different fraternal societies and by the insurance department.

The committee recommended that the bill be killed, but the assembly ordered the bill engrossed by a vote of 62 to 16, the argument being that the assembly had been flooded with petitions for the bill and that it was wanted by all the Woodmen. Members of this and other societies have been very much surprised at the turn of events because it was supposed that the Woodmen fight ended with the Toledo convention last summer. A motion to reconsider this vote is set for next Wednesday, May 19th. Because of the interest aroused the members of the legislature are eagerly seeking information on the subject.

GIRL ATHLETES TO SHOW STUNTS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Annual Exhibition of Lady Gymnasts to Be Held for Limited Audience on Friday

Athletics at the high school is not limited entirely to boys as will be proven conclusively Friday evening when the girls will give their annual "gym" exhibition, in the Hixon gymnasium.

About 450 girls will take part in the exhibition. This number is divided into a number of squads which will each have a series of performances to go through. The last exhibition was excellent from the standpoint of precision and the outlook for this year's exhibition predicts a better showing even than that of last season.

Only a limited number of spectators will be invited due to the lack of accommodations in the high school "gym" for a large throng.
Each girl will be given two tickets.
The exhibition will begin promptly at eight o'clock.

MORSE CASE GOES TO THE JURY TODAY

Whether B. F. Keeler, deputy state organizer of the Modern Woodmen of America will have to pay Alfred Leslie Morse, former Necedah Congregational minister, judgment for a pamphlet entitled "Who's Who and Why," or the Peaigree of Alfred Leslie Morse, M. S., printed by the head office of the insurance company and distributed here by Keeler, will go to the jury today. Attorneys are now making the final arguments to the jury.

BASEBALL KILLS

DES PLAINES, Ill., May 17.—
Struck in the head by a thrown base ball during a game yesterday afternoon, Walter Jannusch, 18, died at his home today.

Not His Preference.

Little James was taken to a luncheon, and the hostess served roast beef. He had managed to put away everything else she served, but left the meat untouched on his plate. The hostess asked him why he hadn't eaten it and he replied: "I can't eat Sunday meat." He doesn't like roasted meat, and that is what they generally have at his home on Sundays.

Weather Man.

There is no "thoroughly reliable weather man." The government "forecasts" are fairly safe for a certain number of hours, but as for the predictions that include the entire year, or any considerable part of it, they are not worth the paper they are printed on. They may be all right, they may be all wrong. Nobody knows which.

Department Store Asset.

In an undertaking like a department store the satisfaction and pride of the women and girls in the place is recognized as one of its real assets. There have been frequent demonstrations of the injury that thoughtless and heartless treatment of women can do a business if this is noised abroad.—Ida M.
Tarbell in the American Magazine.

Weather Conditions

An area of high pressure overlies the plains states this morning and the temperature is generally below the seasonal normal throughout that section, the Mississippi valley and upper lake region; the weather is generally clear except in northern Texas and Oklahoma where it is raining. Rain is also falling in the central Ohio valley and in the north Atlantic states.

A storm of considerable strength is central in Utah and high temperature prevails in that section, and rain is falling in the Pacific states and west plateau region.

The high will dominate the conditions in this section tonight and Tuesday and fair weather will result. The temperature will continue low tonight and heavy frost will form if the weather is clear. The temperature will be somewhat higher Tuesday.

And Frank Dietz Showed His Heels
To Winona Cops

Only the good offices of a friend in Winona saved Frank X. Dietz, proprietor of the Dietz garage of this city, from being haled before the police magistrate of Winona Saturday on three charges of running automobiles without license.

Dietz and two helpers went to Lake City by rail Saturday to unload three new cars on notification from the Minneapolis distributing office that a box car containing three machines had been "bad ordered" and side-tracked at Lake City.

The party of three arrived at Winona at noon and put up for dinner.
In the meantime the police of the city noticed the absence of license plates on the three machines and immediately hunted up the owners, arresting them. Explanations of the men failed until they happened onto a friend who became acquainted with Dietz in La Crosse, and whose testimony was accepted favorably by the chief of police.

"I'll give you five minutes to get out of town," the chief said.

Nothing but rain prevented Dietz and his men from leaving a cloud of dust behind them.

EXPECTANT MOTHER RESPITED

NEW YORK, May 17.—Mrs. Ida Sniffen Walters will not have to stand trial for poisoning her two "love babies" until after her third child is born. Justice Weeks today granted a continuance in the case until next October on the motion of District Attorney Martin. The prosecutor asked for the continuance because Mrs. Walters is to become a mother soon.

CHICAGO WOMAN IS BRUTALLY MURDERED

Mrs. John Coppersmith and her son.

Mrs. John Coppersmith and her young son, John Coppersmith, Jr., were brutally murdered at their home in Chicago late last week. The only clue to the murderer is a finger ring, which was found on the floor near the bodies. The mother was struck with a hammer. Both she and her child had their throats cut.

C. E. SMITH NABBED FOR SELLING STOCK THAT WAS NO GOOD

000, the earnings of the Zeller brothers, in his pocket, and upon investigation, it was found that the American Life Insurance company had gone into liquidation after selling $100,000 in company stock which was worthless. The company had sold practically no insurance during its raid upon the pocketbooks of innocent investors.

Smith was released from Wisconsin state's prison at Waupun three years ago, after serving a three year term for embezzlement. While in prison, Smith met Joseph Ruth.
The two men left the state prison at about the same time, and after "squaring about" in Chicago, Smith journeyed to Arcadia for "a few weeks on the farm," and a visit with "cousin Zeller."

They Paid With Notes
Smith's scheme was good, the Arcadia farmers thought, and after due consideration they consented to take $2,000 worth of stock in the United States Operating company, a concern which is now actually paying fifty cents on the dollar for its stock. The Zeller brothers gave Smith two notes for $1,750 apiece, which Smith immediately discounted at the Bank of Arcadia. The Zellers began to get uneasy as the time for the notes to mature came due, but Smith came back to town, and offered to give them what they had paid for the stock.

Smith had claimed the American Insurance company was the property of the holding concern, the National Operating company, which the Zellers then held stock in. The stock of the concern had been widely advertised, and the Zellers were resting easy in the hopes of being rich when the concern "got on its feet." Smith, it seems, on behalf of the National Operating company, had placed certain blocks of stock in a Chicago bank, to be delivered when paid for. The company then advertised that it owned the insurance concern, and Smith vouched for it to the Zellers.

Smith then returned to Arcadia for another visit and borrowed $1,- 000 in cash to tide him over for a few days.

Company in Bankruptcy
A few weeks ago the Zeller brothers threw the American Insurance company into involuntary bankruptcy, and a receiver was appointed by the United States court for the eastern district of Illinois. The books of the concern were taken over and examined.

ed and about 400 wounded in the two days street fighting in Lisbon alone, it was announced. The casualties in Oporto, Santarem and other cities were very heavy.

The success of the revolutionary movement was due to the revolt of part of the Portuguese army, garrisoned in the capital. On Saturday three regiment went over to the support of bluejackets who were bombarding Lisbon with the eight inch guns of the old battleship Vasco da Gama.

The military revolutionists attacked and captured land batteries.
Marines were landed and the combined land and naval forces threatened to level the capital unless the royalists and the republican guard surrendered. About 200 prisoners were taken.

Some men say "Good Morning" in a manner indicating there never was such an institution.

BANK'S ATTORNEY SCORES WILLIAMS

Opening of Court Fight of Riggs Bank Case Sees Comptroller Hotly Attacked

WASHINGTON, May 17.—"Czar
Williams," "maliciously driven individual," "a man made mad by personal animus," "One with delusional and irrational judgment."

These were a few of Frank J. Hogan's references, as counsel for the Riggs National bank, in the district court today to Comptroller of the Currency John Skelton Williams at the opening of the bank's suit against Williams, Secretary McAdoo and Treasurer Burke.

Hogan was unsparing in his criticism of McAdoo as well, but Williams was the chief object of his attack.
Burke did not figure so conspicuously.

once to the Hotel Biltmore. The top was down on his automobile and he stood up all the way to the hotel, bowing to the huge crowds that swarmed on the walks and in the streets along the way and gave him an ovation that has seldom before been accorded any individual in New York. It was a continuous roar of cheers, applause and stamping of feet.

Cornelius Vanderbilt was the only visitor received by the president before the luncheon at the Hotel Biltmore. He chatted with the executive for about ten minutes. The rest of the time the president spent with his party in his rooms.

The Mayflower, it was learned today, had a rough voyage coming from Washington. Every member of the party suffered by seasickness but the president, Secretary Tamm and others so greatly that he intends returning to Washington by train.

This afternoon the president was to review the fleet as it lies at anchor. He planned to go directly from the civic luncheon to the Mayflower and hoist the blue presidential ensign at 3:30. His guard of honor will be a flotilla of six torpedo boat destroyers steaming ahead of the Mayflower, which will be followed by the Dolphin, Secretary Daniels' yacht, and flanked and followed by the Isis, six more destroyers, the Yankton, press boat, harbor police patrol, the Manhattan carrying civil guests and another destroyer. Ten knots speed will be maintained by the reviewing fleet, 300 yards apart.

Proceeding northward on the west side of the anchored warships, the Mayflower will receive her first fusilade when her bow comes abreast of the stern of the Wyoming, Admiral Fletcher's flagship. In turn, twenty-one guns, at five second intervals, will boom out in a mighty starboard broadside from each of the gray bul-docks as the Mayflower passes to the north end of the fleet. Returning on the east side, near the Manhattan shore, the fleet will not salute.

12,000 A YEAR HURT IN STATE

These Are Figures for Industrial Accidents in Wisconsin Given by State Commission

UNSAFE PLANTS 'UNGUARDED GUNS'

Man Who Has Never Had an Accident in His Plant Must Take Same Precautions as Rest

Unguarded gears and elevators and other machinery which has possibilities for loss of life or maiming is as the proverbial "unloaded gun," in the language of the Wisconsin industrial commission, in a bulletin just issued. The commission says that 12,000 accidents have occurred in Wisconsin factories the past year. While sympathizing with the factory owner—generally the small proprietor—who has never had an accident from his unguarded machinery, the commission makes it clear that the expense involved does not warrant the owner taking chances. He must be on the safe side. His plant is the "unloaded gun." Extracts from the bulletin mentioned follow:

During the year 1914, about 12,000 accidents causing disability of more than one week, occurred in the 10,000 factories and workshops of Wisconsin. In this one year 163 men were killed, 5 were permanently totally disabled, 50 were seriously crippled, losing an arm, a leg or an eye, and 495 lost fingers or toes.

If the total accidents were equally distributed over all the establishments each factory would have at least one each year. But in many of the larger factories 100 to 500 accidents are not uncommon. From this

"We complain bitterly at times of the awful home conditions of the new-come immigrants. But if they never see anything better what can they expect? They tell a story of a Polish miner at Ishpeming, Mich., who was obliged to spend two weeks in the company's hospital. His home had been the despair of the company's nurse, so dirty and crowded it was. But when the man returned from the hospital the place was immediately transformed. 'Clean and nice all the time now,' he told the nurse when she exclaimed at the change. 'Clean and nice like the hospital, feel good.' The new workshops teach many men and women what the hospital taught the man."—Ida M. Tarbell in the American Magazine.

we may conclude that for every establishment having 500 accidents, there are approximately 500 small factories which have no accidents at all during that year.

The fact to be considered, however, is that Wisconsin has 12,000 accidents a year. The toll of industry upon human lives, human resources and happiness is appalling. Our problem is to reduce the losses and suffering due to accidents. The size of the establishment or the nature of the industry is of little significance. All factories may cause accidents. The hazard differs only in degree. To properly protect our workmen, each place and each danger point in each place must be safeguarded. The single unguarded belt of a thousand may be the cause of maiming or killing a man; the fact that an unguarded set screw has not caused a single injury during a hundred years is no security that it will never entangle the clothes of an unfortunate victim, wind him around the shaft and add one more to the list of fatal accidents.

To the factory owner who has been in business twenty years and has never had an accident on that "harmless little gear," an order to guard it seems ridiculous and absurd. But during the past year those same little gears killed one man, caused two men to lose fingers, and injured seventy-three others less seriously. That gear which has run unguarded for twenty years without doing any harm, has not become harmless on that account. Who knows when it may claim a hand or foot or even the life of one of our workmen?

Costly Elevator Accidents

Again, take a man who has used an elevator for twenty years without a single accident. To him an order to install a speed governor, automatic gates, etc., is simply "intended to put him out of business." He does not realize that if all the Wisconsin elevator accidents which have occurred during the last three years had been under the workmen's compensation law, the cost to the owners would have been about $150,000; and yet but one serious accident occurred on an elevator which complied with the orders of the industrial commission.

How the small factory frequently looks at the safety work of the commission is illustrated by the following quotation from a letter: "Excuse me please, but of all the malicious, absurd instructions which one could give, his (the commission's deputy) are the worst."

The commission can fully appreciate how this man feels. He probably never had an accident in his mill, and perhaps he never will. But it is always the "unloaded gun" which does the damage.

It is this situation which often makes it difficult for the commission to know just what is the best thing to do. Not one in a thousand of the large manufacturers ever raises a question as to the orders of the commission. But the owners of small shops frequently do, and they have a right to. The "absurd instructions" referred to above related to "hand rails on stairs," "unguarded set screws," "unguarded belts," "unguarded pulleys" and "unguarded gears." These danger points have been guarded in most of the factories of the state; yet for the thirty-one months preceding April 1, 1914, 678 accidents occurred on them, eight of which were fatal, and seventeen caused permanent serious injuries. One fatal accident in a small factory might bankrupt the owner, while the money spent in safeguards invariably yields a good rate of interest in a reduction in insurance rates.

The guarding of machinery, however, is but one phase of accident prevention. If every danger point on every machine were guarded perfectly, making accidents upon them impossible, then we would have eliminated just about one-fourth of all accidents.

"Light, sun, order and beauty are as powerful preventives of evil as darkness, disorder and ugliness are incentives to evil."—Ida M. Tarbell in the American Magazine.

The following table shows the distribution of the 21,374 industrial accidents, causing disability for over a week, which occurred during the thirty-one months ending April 1, 1914. The figures for the cost in compensation and medical aid, had all accidents been compensated according to the present law, are partly estimated but are based on reliable averages.

Industrial Accidents During Thirty-One Months Ending April 1, 1914	Pct. of Total	Cost in compensation & medical aid.
Machinery	23.8	$467,000.00
Hoisting apparatus	1.9	58,000.00
Explosions and burns	1.6	170,000.00
Struck by moving objects	5.0	500,000.00
Falls of workmen	3.1	329,000.00
Falls of objects	1.2	144,000.00
Tools and hand apparatus	1.4	78,000.00
Stepping and kneeling on nails	4.2	52,000.00
All other causes	4.9	88,000.00
Total	49.9	$1,336,000.00

From the above table we must conclude that the great majority of accidents are not preventable by guards. Accidents may be further reduced by more extensive guarding

"In a certain steel plant, where an efficient lighting system was installed, the output at night was increased a trifle over 10 per cent. In order to determine whether this was due wholly to the introduction of the better lighting conditions, the lamps were taken out and for a time the work was carried on at night with the old lighting system. It was found that the amount of work dropped off over 10 per cent. When, however, the work was resumed under the improved conditions, the men were able again to produce 10 per cent more work. The saving comes almost entirely through the worker. It relieves his eye, his attention, his fear of accident."—Ida M. Tarbell in the American Magazine of machinery, stairways, etc., but with all these danger points made safe, there still remains a vast number of accidents which cannot be prevented by a mechanical safeguard. This class of accidents can be prevented only by the man on the job—by the workman himself. Many of the large employers have recognized this fact and have adopted proper means of educating their employees and instructing them in the field of accident prevention. The education of workmen—teaching them to be careful, and arousing their interest in the safety movement—has achieved marvelous results. It has brought about great reductions of accidents 75 per cent the first year under compensation, and two-thirds of this reduction he attributes directly to the educating of his men. Reductions ranging from 30 per cent experienced during the years 1912, 1913 and 1914 are common.

How Safety Committees are Organized

The campaign against accidents and for the instruction of the men usually begins with the organization of safety committees. The central safety committee is composed of the superintendent and the foreman of each department. Most of the large factories employ an engineer who devotes all his time to studying means of accident prevention; he is also a member of the central committee. The foreman of each department appoints a committee of rank and file workmen to make thorough inspections of the department at certain intervals. The personnel of this committee is changed frequently in order to give as many workmen as possible a chance to serve. Recommendations and suggestions made by the inspection committee are taken up by the central committee at their regular meeting, and usually such recommendations are complied with.

In addition, the central committee is the central bureau of instruction and information. When a serious or typical accident occurs, a description of it is posted in conspicuous places, and in a language which can be understood by all the men.

"There is no feature of the new workshop which gives more satisfaction to the observer than the new ideas of order which prevail in them. . . . Disorder and dirt are probably the most wasteful features in industry, but inconveniences are a close second."—Ida Tarbell in the American Magazine.

Several large factories publish monthly safety magazines which are distributed among employees. These magazines and bulletins contain descriptions of accidents, inspection reports, safety suggestions and many other items of interest about the plant. Besides being very interesting to the employees, they are of great value in instructing the men and impressing upon them the importance of playing safe. We are privileged to quote from some of these publications.

In a campaign against accidents and for the instruction of the men, many difficult problems present themselves. Foremen and superintendents often are confronted with conditions with which it is difficult to deal. To discuss such problems

GOTHAM CONDUCTS FIGHT AGAINST COCAINE TRAFFIC

Laws Help Police in Stamping Out Drug Curse; Many Results Obtained

(By CARLTON TEN EYCK).
(Written for the United Press).

NEW YORK, May 17.—In an endeavor to make New York one of the most healthful cities in the United States, Father Knickerbocker is conducting a finish fight on the drug fiends within his gates. And to get at the root of the evil which is slowly sapping the strength of some of its weak willed citizens the city has delegated the work of stamping out this deadly habit to the police department.

Aided by the laws, both state and national, the police officials who have this special work in charge are making big strides toward ridding the city of the users of drugs by arresting them and putting them in hospitals for treatment. The Harrison law, passed by the last congress has been a big help in catching "runners" of cocaine and heroin who formerly could pass unmolested from one state to another with big quantities of "dope." Under the new law this is prohibited and while it does not assist the New York police department in apprehending people outside of the city it makes the work of the "runners" more dangerous. Before the Harrison law became effective much of the drugs used in New York city were bought in Newark and Philadelphia and conveyed into New York by automobile or even by a man carrying a suit case on a train.

And the Block bill, passed by the Albany legislature, has materially aided the police in putting the sellers of "coke" and "snow" behind prison bars. A bill recently signed by Gov. Whitman will allow magistrates to send victims of drugs to a state farm, after their release from the city hospitals, where they can get well and recover their strength and manhood. For when a man is addicted to the use of cocaine the treatment he receives in a hospital is only part of the fight he has to make to recover himself entirely. Drug users are usually despondent and easily depressed and as soon as some misfortune overtakes them they are liable to resort to a sniff of cocaine to brace them up.

Results Being Obtained
The record of the police department in a little over a year shows that results are being obtained. In 1913 only about 500 arrests were made for this offense. But in 1914 over 2,000 people were picked up by the police and plain clothes men and so far this year they have been catching them at the rate of 2,500 a year.

A prominent police official, in speaking of the crusade against the drug evil, said recently that he is convinced the police department is gradually stamping out the habit, for it is getting harder and harder to find people addicted to the use of drugs. This is because a majority of the worse type of drug fiends are now in hospitals and city institutions receiving treatment.

Cut Off Supply
This police officer explained how they worked to catch drug fiends. When a street peddler, the man who sells the drug to the victims, is caught that cuts off all his customers. Unless they can establish new "connections" within forty eight hours they must appeal for help, as they cannot stand the strain of being without drugs. And when a big wholesaler of drugs is captured that cuts off the supply of a great many street peddlers, which in turn deprives all the patrons of these street men of cocaine and heroin. And it is the sellers of drugs the police are particularly anxious to catch for they can put them in jail, if the evidence is sufficiently strong. When a drug fiend is caught the police treat him as a sick person, for they know it is impossible for him to break himself of the habit.

How to Get Evidence
But in many cases it is extremely difficult to obtain evidence that will hold in a court of law. This is because of the shrewd methods by the street peddlers in selling their illegal wares. A drug fiend will pay the peddler the money and then will receive instruction to walk half a block down the street and pick up a cigarette box lying in the gutter. In the box the victim finds a "deck" of cocaine. Another way practiced to evade the law is for a peddler to tell the buyer of the drug to walk down the street until he sees a girl with a muff. When he passes the girl she slips him a little paper package from inside her muff and for a few hours the victim is happy. As soon as the effect of the "dope" wears off he becomes dull and depressed again and the craving for more drives him to the peddler.

If the drug fiend has no money he is made desperate and is forced to steal to obtain funds for the dope. This, the police department believes, accounts for most of the petty robberies that occur all over the city. If the use of deadly drugs can be stopped, or practically eliminated, it is thought petty crime will be lessened by fifty per cent.

OFFICER SURPRISED

LONDON, April 24.—By Mail to New York.—A zealous young officer intent upon seeing that his men on guard over a stretch were doing their work properly, crept up behind one of them on a dark night, and was astonished to find threepence shoved noiselessly into his hand by the sentry. "Mine's Stout," whispered the soldier, "but next time you come around don't make such a bloody row about it."

Eggs Minus Bacon.

The vogue of bacon as a breakfast dish does not date back very far. We learn from Macaulay that the fare served in 1831 at Rogers' breakfast parties—the most famous on record—consisted of "very good coffee, very good tea and very good eggs, butter left in the midst of ice and hot rolls."

FAVOR LAWS TO SET FREE SITES

Government Would Let Out Land Free for the Use of Summer Homes

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The secretary of agriculture has promulgated a set of regulations for administering the new law which provides that national forest land may be leased for summer home sites and other recreational purposes in tracts of five acres or less for periods not to exceed thirty years. This law supplements the revocable permit system under which recreational use of the forests already had developed considerably. Many users have been unwilling to make substantial improvements because of the uncertainty of tenure involved in the old form of permit, which, however, is still expected to meet the requirements of persons who are not likely to occupy the land for more than a few years, or to make elaborate improvements.

Promote Use of Land

The primary object of the "term permits," as the leases are called, is not to obtain revenue but to promote the use of national forest land for recreational purposes, say the regulations. At the same time, since permittees receive special benefits, it is regarded as only fair that they should reimburse the government for the expenditure incurred in administering the forests. The rates range from $5 a year up, in accordance with the location of the land, the demand for it, and the use to which it will be put. The district foresters are authorized to grant permits to applicants who intend to make improvements costing less than $1,000 and to use the land for a period not longer than fifteen years. All other permits will be approved by the forester at Washington.

Applications must be filed with the supervisor of the forest affected, designating the location of the land desired, the use to be made of it, and the approximate cost of contemplated improvements. Examination and survey of the land will be made by the forest service free of charge. An application for a hotel or summer resort site must be accompanied by plans and specifications of proposed structures and a statement as to their probable cost. The law stipulates five acres as the maximum, and it is believed that much less than this will suffice for most persons, but permittees will not be placed close together by heavy demand for land in a particular locality.

Forest officers are instructed to prevent monopolistic control of desirable locations by individuals or groups and no permits will be given for lands which are subject to entry under the homestead law, nor for lands which will be needed for public or quasi-public purposes.

SPRING MEDICINE

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the Great Blood Purifier, is the Best.

Spring sickness comes in some degree to every man, woman and child in our climate.

It is that run-down condition of the system that results from impure, impoverished, devitalized blood.

It is marked by loss of appetite and that tired feeling, and in many cases by some form of eruption.

The best way to treat spring sickness is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. This old reliable family medicine purifies, enriches and revitalizes the blood. It is an all-the-year-round alterative and tonic, and is absolutely the best Spring medicine.

Get your blood in good condition at once—now. Delay may be dangerous. Ask your druggist for Hood's Sarsaparilla, and insist on having it, for nothing else can take its place.

YOU CAN'T RUB IT OUT

The pain of rheumatism is something that you cannot rub out. Every sufferer from rheumatism has been advised to rub this or that on the affected part but after all the rubbing the pain remained.

This blood and rheumatism come together and if they are properly treated they will go together. One prominent medical writer says that "there is no acute febrile disease in which anemia occurs with greater rapidity." Anemia means thin blood and thin blood is something that can be corrected so why not build up the blood until the rheumatic poisons are driven out?

This is exactly what is done in the treatment of rheumatism with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Acute, muscular and articular rheumatism all show improvement as the thin blood is built up and when the poisons in the blood are burned up and driven out the rheumatism does not return as long as the blood is kept rich and red.

Care in the diet is important during the treatment and every rheumatic sufferer should have two booklets published by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., called "Building Up the Blood" and "What to Eat and How to Eat." They are free on request. Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

SPOTLIGHTS

ROSE STAHL

The Henry B. Harris estate will present Miss Rose Stahl in her new play, "A Perfect Lady," at La Crosse Theater tomorrow night. The play is in four acts and was written by Channing Pollock and Renold Wolf.

Miss Rose Stahl has long been distinguished as one of the most notable players on the American stage. As a comedienne she is known and admired throughout the breadth of the land by folk in every walk of life from the humble shop girl to the most opulent plutocrat. Miss Stahl has achieved this pre-eminence by sheer hard work. At first she was a newspaper woman. Then came an opportunity to join a stock company in Philadelphia, which Miss Stahl accepted.

After leaving the stock work Miss Stahl took engagements with touring companies for several seasons. Then came her venture into vaudeville with "The Chorus Girl." The late Henry B. Harris had her little play let expanded into a four act play and brought it to production under the title of "The Chorus Lady." Her interpretation of the name part in the piece brought Miss Stahl stellar honors. After "The Chorus Lady" had done full service, Miss Stahl appeared in "Maggie Pepper" which Charles Klein wrote for her.

"OUTCAST"

That much-discussed play, "Outcast" with Elsie Ferguson, its star, comes to the La Crosse Theater on Friday night, May 21. The play enjoyed a run of nearly a whole season in New York. It is seldom that such a strong combination of play and player is found as is offered in this four act drama of contemporary London life with talented Elsie Ferguson in the role of Miriam, which she has made all her own. Her author is Hubert Henry Davies, a well known British dramatist. "Outcast" is his most sincere contribution to the theater and is an intensely human portrait, a profoundly moving drama of human relations.

Dottie's Refuge.

In all well-regulated households there is a cat to be blamed for mysteriously broken vases and similar catastrophes. However, in little Dottie's home there was no cat just then. When Dottie's mother came home and saw the broken vase she demanded an explanation. "It was," said the little girl, searching for a refuge, "it was the telephone!"—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Wenzel Obituary

Emil E. Wenzel was born in the town of Burns, La Crosse county, Wis., March 17, 1879.

He was married to Miss Augusta Kummel on September 9, 1907, and is survived by his wife, one child, mother, five brothers and five sisters.

He lived in this county all his life and naturally claimed a very wide acquaintance.

Funeral services were held at his home in West Salem, Rev. S. L. McKee officiating. The choir consisted of Messrs. George Dudley, Harley Oakes, Peter Michelson and Frank Bolles. A profusion of flowers gave evidence of many sorrowing friends. Interment took place in the Hamilton cemetery.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisulphated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisulphated magnesia, which can be obtained from O. T. Erhart or any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

VETERAN VILLIERS NONE TOO USED TO THE SCENES AT FRONT WITH ARMIES

BY WILLIAM G. SHEPHERD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1915, by the United Press. Copyrighted in Great Britain.)
HEADQUARTERS OF THE BRITISH ARMY, Northern France, April 18.—By Mail to New York.—This is Frederick Villiers' seventeenth war. Everywhere we go in the English lines some officer says to him, "But I suppose you've seen all this sort of thing before."
And Villiers, who has pictured war all over the world, says: "It's all new to me. I'm a babe at this new game of war."
Villiers' first campaign was in 1876. In those days no one touched off a cannon until the enemy was in sight. It was like aiming a rifle.
But this afternoon we looked on at twentieth century artillery firing. The British artillerymen were at attention at their gun, when the officer in charge showed us a map.
"You see we're in this position," he explained, "and we're going to shoot at this spot."
He indicated a point four miles distant in the German lines. Farms and roads and a village and the English and German trenches lay between us and the target.
"There's a ruined farm house there. German officers are always hanging around it and we have to touch it up every now and then."
Telephone is used.
"Fire!" he said. The shell trailed the echo through the sky and the British officer some miles ahead of us, who saw the shell explode telephoned back that it had fallen short.
The guns were charged, the man fired again, this time the message said the shell had gone a little too far. The British artillerymen tinkered a little with his gun and then the gun boomed out again.
"It hit the farm house," was the message that came back over the telephone. It was hundred per cent shooting for the two test shots are always necessary in range finding. The twentieth century British artillerymen were showing how well they knew how to shoot.
But there is another point in this twentieth century warfare that is even more important and that is to keep in mind where not to hit.
Later in the day we saw an action

SPARTA GIRL DIES OF PNEUMONIA AT HOME SATURDAY

Funerals of Mrs. Maggie Larson and Lars Holdt Held at Pleasant Valley and Fish Creek Church

SPARTA, Wis., May 17.—(Special.)—The death of Margaret Elizabeth Gilliland occurred at her home near Leon, Saturday. Margaret, who was the only daughter of John and Margaret Gilliland, had reached the age of twelve years. She has been sick for about a year, and it was but a short time ago that she was getting rapidly better, but pneumonia set in and the end came at about noon Saturday.
She is survived by her father and mother and two brothers, Glenn and Forest, the former of whom is an ensign in the United States navy now stationed off the coast of China.
The funeral will be held in the Sparta Catholic church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be made in the Catholic cemetery near Sparta.

Maggie Larson Buried
The funeral of Mrs. Maggie Larson, wife of Alfred Larson, who died at her home in Pleasant Valley last Friday, will be held tomorrow in the Fish Creek church. Interment will be made in the Catholic cemetery near Sparta.

Lars Holdt Dies
The body of Lars Holdt was brought here from Mendota and was taken directly to his home north of Angelo. The funeral was held Saturday, Rev. Hogan officiating. Interment was made in Woodlawn Cemetery. Mr. Holdt leaves a wife and four children.

Camp McCoy Opened
The railway station at Camp McCoy opened Saturday for the summer season. A few soldiers are already stationed at McCoy detailed to get the range ready for the coming encampment. The first to arrive will be a division of the Indiana National guard, which will arrive about May 25.

Business Men Plan Meet
A meeting of the Sparta business men will be held in the Jefferson office next Wednesday night, for the further planning and preparation for the convention of the trustees, superintendents, and matrons of Wisconsin asylums, which will be held at Sparta June 8, 9 and 10. All business men who are interested in the reception and welcome plans for the visiting delegation are requested to meet and help in the preparation.

Mme. Marie Depage.

It was maternal love that led Mme. Marie Depage of Belgium, who was in this country soliciting funds for her suffering countrymen, to take passage on the Lusitania, which was her tomb. Just before she sailed on the big liner she received a message that her seventeen-year-old son would soon enter the Belgian army and take his place in the trenches. For this reason she started for home earlier than she had originally planned.

Harry Objected.
Harry, two years old, whose mother is a widow, protests vigorously when she goes out with any of her friends in the evening, as he is left at home with an aunt. One evening recently Harry was left to entertain a caller while his mother was putting on her hat. After a long silence Harry blurted out: "Have you a mamma?" The amazed friend said that he had, whereupon Harry said: "Well, why don't you take your own mamma out, then?"—Chicago Tribune.

HOBSON DECLARES BRITISH STEAMERS NOT UNRESISTING

Order of Admiralty to Ram Submarines Makes Them Actively Hostile Says Ex-Congressman

NEW YORK, May 17.—Richmond Pearson Hobson, ex-congressman from Alabama and Spanish-American war hero, today gave out through his brother-in-law, George W. Hull, Jr., a statement, criticizing President Wilson's demands upon Germany and impugning the good faith of the British admiralty in the Lusitania disaster. He advocated the fullest investigation of all facts surrounding the sinking of the Lusitania before this government takes any steps that may lead to international troubles.
"The president's note to Germany is firm and masterful," he said, "but its central demand of immunity of American lives on merchant vessels assumes that these vessels will be unarmed and unresisting towards enemy war vessels and, in virtue of which non-resistance international law gives them the right of immunity of life."
"The order of the British admiralty instructing British merchantmen to attack by ramming German submarines on sight, makes all British merchant vessels armed and resisting towards Germany's submarine and nullifies their claims in international law to warning and immunity of life from these submarines."

Hobson declared a widowed cousin applied at the Cunard offices here for passage on the Lusitania. An old friend, an employee in the Cunard office, took her aside, he alleged and told her that the vessel was acting under admiralty orders and that she simply must not take passage on it. He pledged her to secrecy until after the trip, Hobson declared. Hobson questioned why the Lusitania took the southern route across the Irish sea, where submarines were known to be lurking, why speed was cut down and why no efforts had been made to guard the liner from attack.

England he charged, had a motive for desiring such a tragedy, while Germany would wish to avoid it.

That Also Be Thought Of.
She was leaving the city for home, and by way of making her departure pleasant for those who had served her gave a nickel to a chambermaid, saying, "Mary, you take a nice long car-ride." The maid replied: "Yes, ma'am; thank you, ma'am, but how will I get back?"

Public Morality.
I have not the slightest regard for that statesmanship which is divorced from the morality which we say ought to guide us in our private life, which we gather for a nation as for individuals from the religion we profess. Time, persistent labor, fidelity to the great principles which we hold and believe in, will give us the victory over existing evils.—John Bright.

FIND BODY OF BOY

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 17.—The body of Dewitt Kimball, 20, son of a Fond du Lac contractor, was found in the Milwaukee river at the foot of Detroit street Saturday. The boy disappeared from the home of Mrs. C. E. Forsythe, a friend of the family according to Mrs. Forsythe, and stayed at her home several days. He left to room elsewhere, but visited her Friday and told of losing his position.

KILLS WIFE AND SELF

GREEN BAY, Wis., May 17.—One of the most spectacular murders and suicides ever enacted in Bay, Frank Deville, prominent politician, former sheriff and candidate for aldermanic honors at the election, shot and instantly killed his wife and then killed himself. The street here early Saturday act is believed to have been caused by family troubles and a pending divorce suit. Five children survived.

He Would Not Take No.

"I'll not take 'no' for an answer," Miss Bunker—Priscilla, he declared bravely, as he persistently pressed suit. "Then, sir," replied the cultured Boston girl, rising proud the occasion, "will you, in lieu of much hackneyed negative assent accept my positive declaration? I respond concurrently to the query 'pounded?' And he did."

Wanted Information.

Little Margaret was bright and proud parents accorded her the privilege of answering the phone when rang. Margaret answered the phone one day and was asked by the caller at the other end of the wire to her big brother Will to the place. Margaret knew that Will was living upstairs and she did not wish to disturb him needlessly, so she said: "Is it anything very particu-lar?"

OXFORD IS SCENE OF KHAKI-GLAD

Once Staid Institution Is Given Over to Works of the Present War

OXFORD, Eng., April 28.—(By May to New York.)—Placid historic Oxford, site of Oxford university, is today a scene of khaki.

Where once morning coats and top hats prevailed, along with flannels and smart dress, students of this historic institution of learning are clad in the olive of the military and the town and college themselves are scenes of martial surroundings.

Convalescent soldiers wounded at the front are quartered about the town and in the university buildings. Smooth lawns and grassy plots surrounding the ancient institution of learning are worn bare in spots from drilling feet. Class room dissertations on deep subjects of learning are few and far between and the very atmosphere of Oxford reflects the present crisis. In many of the dormitories that in peace times housed the youth of British aristocracy wounded men are today resting on cots surrounded by nurses and hospital equipment.

At a recent presentation of degrees the Oxford under-graduates wore the cap and gown over their khaki and soon afterward hastened to the drill grounds where they are preparing for the country's service if they are needed.

His Usual Behavior.

A little boy with big, innocent blue eyes and sunny smile had been having an unusually good romp all morning, but when dinner was announced he so quietly and sedately followed out after his uncle, who was visiting them, that the uncle, noticing, said to him: "Ray, I believe you are a pretty good boy." Ray, looking up solemnly, replied: "I'm just like this all the time."

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

a whole community. Here the foremen and superintendents of many plants meet and discuss their difficulties. One may have solved what another is still struggling with, and the interchanging of ideas and experiences is most valuable. Milwaukee has accomplished wonders in the reduction of accidents. A large part of this is due to the Milwaukee "round table." Other cities are now following very rapidly in the organization of similar round tables.

Total accidents which could, and others which could not have been prevented by guards are described. Quotations are included from manufacturers' safety bulletins and from Miss Ida M. Tarbell's articles in the 1914 and 1915 numbers of the American Magazine. In the near future the commission hopes to publish a bulletin showing the relation of a disorderly, poorly lighted, poorly ventilated, and unsanitary factory to the number of accidents.

Following Orders

She was a little girl and very polite. It was the first time she had been on a visit alone, and she had been carefully instructed how to behave.

"If they ask you to dine with them," papa had said, "you must say, 'No, thank you, I have already dined.'"

It turned out just as papa had anticipated.

"Come along, Marjorie," said her little friend's father, "you must have a bite with us."

"No, thank you," said the little girl with dignity; "I have already bitten."

Wanted Other Boot

It is on the country circuit and the audience is sadly lacking in appreciation of the efforts of the actors.

Catcalls and groans, vegetables and eggs are directed at the stage, but still the well meaning performer, who is in the midst of a long monologue, continues to recite his lines.

Finally a despairing spectator huris a boot on the stage and the actor starts to retreat behind the scenes.

"Keep on playing!" cries the manager in the wings. "Keep on playing till we get the second boot!"

A farmer leased a field to a farm laborer, and the rental was to be one-fourth of the crop raised. Harvest time came in due course, but the farmer was amazed to find that he got nothing. The tenant hauled three loads of produce to his own barn, but there was nothing left for the farmer. He, of course, remonstrated.

"Here," he said, "how's this? Wasn't I to get a fourth of the crop?"

"Yes, sir, you was," the tenant answered, "but as it turned out there was only three loads."—Harper's Magazine.

MISS ENGEN WEDS CALEDONIA MAN

CALEDONIA, Minn., May 17.—(Special.)—Miss Margaret, daughter of Mrs. S. Engen, living six miles south of Caledonia, was united in marriage to Mr. R. C. Pieper, of Blooming Prairie on Wednesday of last week. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. J. Wein, at the Norwegian Lutheran parsonage. Immediately following the tying of the nuptial knot, the wedding party repaired to the home of the bride's mother where a wedding reception was held.

Fix Chautauqua Dates

Advance notices of the Chautauqua to be held in our village this summer has been received. This is the first effort on the part of our citizens along this line and the week promises many enjoyable and attractive features. The Chautauqua will be under the management of the big Redpath Vawter system of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and will continue for five days, beginning the second week of July. Some of the best lyceum and platform talent in the central west are scheduled for appearance, as well as some musical headliners that will be sure to please. What with a good program for the week, and good auto roads leading from everywhere to Caledonia, we may well expect to see some great crowds. Full notice of the program will appear later.

Local and Personal
Honorable Sidney Anderson, representative from this district at Washington, was in town for a few hours on Wednesday of last week. While here he was questioned by some of the business men as to the status of affairs at the national capital. He was of the opinion that the grave matters of the hour would be well taken care of by the president and that there was not the slightest probability that congress would have to convene with any war-like intent.

Mrs. O. Berg of Sheldon who was operated on recently at the Brownings hospital is getting along as well as could be expected.

The new Briscoe cars arrived in town last week, and the Bowers Auto Co., have already sold three of them. The Briscoe is a French car and it was not thought that there was so many sympathizers of the allies in the village but the car is a fine looking one and no doubt there are other reasons than sympathy for buying.

BENTON'S SLAYER HURT IN CONFLICT

Gen. Fierro Wounded in a Three Day Battle in which Villistas Repulse Obregon Attack

EL PASO, Texas, May 17.—Gen. Rodolfo Fierro, slayer of the Englishman William S. Benton, at Juarez, last year, was wounded during fighting between Villa and Obregon troops which has been raging for three days in the mountains near Hacienda de Otaes, Guanajuato. His wound was in the leg and is not fatal. Fierro, also at times Villa's personal body guard, was commanding a Villa brigade in the battle when wounded.

The Villistas were said today to have finally repulsed Obregon's right wing, composed of a powerful column of Yaqui Indians with infantry, artillery and cavalry. Obregon's attempt to flank Villa's tent came as a surprise and it took three days' desperate battling before the issue was decided.

Losses were enormous on both sides. It's nearly time, isn't it, for some male of the species to achieve distinction in these parts by wearing the first straw hat of the season?

BLOCK LOBBY TO GET SEATS FOR "FOOL THERE WAS"

People were standing on the street at the Majestic Sunday for nearly two hours waiting to see the wonderful production of Robert Hilliard's success, "A Fool There Was."

Edward Jose is known to theater goers all over the world. Starting his stage career with Mme. Bernhardt, Mr. Jose played practically every classical role in that actress's repertoire. It was with Mme. Bernhardt that he learned the value of careful attention to detail which has earned him the name of "The Warfield of the Movies." When he produced Cyrano de Bergerac, Rostand's brilliant play, in Paris, one of his audience was the "divine Sarah," who warmly congratulated him on his success.

Miss Bara is known to audiences in Berlin and Vienna as well as in Paris, where she was leading woman at the Theatre Antoine and the Gymnase. She is peculiarly suited by appearance and temperament to enact the part of the beautiful heartless vampire woman, who lures men to her only to destroy them. The gowns she wears in this role, in themselves, cost a small fortune and were designed largely by Miss Bara herself.

"A Fool There Was" is at the Majestic today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

GLASGOW, May 17.—The Anchor liner Transylvania arrived here today from New York, having taken the northern route because of warnings of the presence of German submarines off the south coast of Ireland, near the spot where the Lusitania was torpedoed.

She brought 879 passengers, most of them destined for Liverpool. Until she arrived at Greenock at 3 a. m. today, the Transylvania had not been heard from since she left New York May 7.

When Spencer Tried Vegetarianism. Herbert Spencer tried vegetarianism for about a year, says the London Chronicle. "At the end of that time," he relates, "I went over all that I had written during the year, and consigned it to the fire." Spencer found an exclusively vegetarian diet too bulky, and came to the conclusion that rational life is a compromise. In the matter of diet it is best to strike the happy mean "between the tiger pacing its cage and the cow lying upon the grass."

MAY USE POTATOES IN PLACE OF BREAD

Federal Experts Say Ten Cents Worth of Potatoes of More Food Value than Two Loaves of Bread

WASHINGTON, May 17.—If wheat remains at its present high figure or continues to rise in price and if there is a corresponding increase in the price of bread, scientists in the United States department of agriculture suggests that the ordinary household will find it advantageous to eat more potatoes and less bread. With potatoes at 60 cents a bushel, ten cents worth—or ten pounds—will give the consumer a little more actual nourishment than two one-pound loaves of bread at five cents each. The protein and fat are present in appreciably larger amounts in the bread, but the potatoes will be found to furnish more carbohydrates, and more heat units.

Carbohydrates (starch) contribute greatly to the energy value of any diet and since potatoes are rich in these, families that wish to expend their money to the best advantage are recommended to consider whether they cannot make a more extended use of them. They are easy to cook and when prepared in different ways can be made to lend variety to the winter diet when green vegetables are hard to obtain. Like other foods relatively rich in carbohydrates, however, potatoes should be eaten with foods correspondingly rich in protein, such as milk, meat, eggs, etc., and with foods like butter, cream and meat fat to supply the fat that the body needs.

Under normal conditions in Europe and America the potato ranks next to bread as a carbohydrate food. If prices change sufficiently to make it desirable from a financial point of view there is no scientific reason why potatoes should not be substituted to a great extent for bread. In addition the potato like many fruits and vegetables, helps to neutralize an acid condition in the body. This is another reason for its being eaten in combination with meat, fish and other animal foods.

CHOIR MASTER HOST OF BETHEL WORKERS IN SURPRISE PARTY

Singers Visit J. H. Johnson of Bethel Church and Present Him with a Smoking Cabinet

J. H. Johnson, choir master of Bethel Lutheran church, was at the church at the appointed hour for choir practice Saturday night. But his singers were not. Johnson wondered where they were and kept on wondering until he reached his home in response to an urgent telephone call.

And there he found them. Then, and not until then, did he know why his band of choristers had "cut" practice, a trick very seldom turned by them.

Mr. Johnson has been leader of the choir for two years, and the members of the choir thought it was time to show their leader that his services are appreciated. The little surprise party at his home was their way of showing it. They presented him with a smoking cabinet, Andrew Sletten making the presentation speech.

Home Mass of Flowers

The home was a mass of flowers for the occasion, roses and ferns being the scheme in the parlor. Lilies, hyacinths and carnations were the decorations in the dining room with sprays of wild ferns and vines.

Light refreshments were served at eleven o'clock after an evening of merriment enlivened with music and games.

Among those present were the Misses Julia Severson, Julia Noem, Esther Noem, Theresa Severson and Avilda Melbo; Mesdames Andrew Sletten, Henry Woll and A. Blystad; and Messrs. Henry Woll, Haagen Olsen, Andrew Sletten, Clarence Outcalt and J. H. Johnson.

Mr. Johnson was the guest last evening of a stag party at his home, 1902 Charles street, given by his wife, the occasion of his forty-seventh birthday. Mr. Johnson was presented with a meerschaum pipe. Those present were the Messrs. Andrew Sletten, Eleasus Mekvold, J. J. Noem, P. O. Winge, Ole Olsen, Henry Woll, James Severson and J. H. Johnson.

MRS. MARIE SCHLICHT DIES

Mrs. Marie Schlicht, 76, wife of Gottfried Schlicht, died at 11 o'clock last night at her home, 1223 South Eleventh street, of bronchitis, after an illness of six weeks. She was a native of Germany, coming to this country in 1883.

She is survived by her husband; four sons, Gustave, Fred, Ernest and Herman; and three daughters, Mrs. Minnie Engler, Mrs. Lena Ziers and Mrs. August Tanke, all of La Crosse. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday at the home and at 2:30 at the German Lutheran church, West and Cameron avenues, Rev. Julius T. Gamm officiating. Interment will be in Oak Grove cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to all friends and relatives for the kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our husband, father and brother. Especially do we wish to thank Rev. J. Gamm and all those who sent floral offerings.

Mrs. Albert Zischke and Family. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tanke. Mrs. Chas. Bartz.

War Office News of Fighting

PARIS

PARIS, May 17.—Whole companies of Germans were slaughtered in bloody fighting in a blinding rainstorm around Neuville and Souchez, according to dispatches from the battle front today. The Germans attacked fiercely at four distinct points. They sought to recover the ground gained by the French in the Saturday and Sunday fighting. In each instance they were repulsed with heavy losses.

BERLIN

BERLIN, via Wireless to Sayville, L. I., May 17.—Unofficial reports from West Galicia confirm news dispatches telling of the enormity of the defeat suffered by the Russians. At the same time they make ridiculous certain claims made by the enemy.

For instance: It was announced at Petrograd that the Russian general commanding the Forty-eighth division had been specially mentioned for bravery. Reports received here today said that the Forty-eighth Russian division has been entirely disposed of by annihilation or capture. The commander was taken prisoner.

Runaway June

By George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester

By special arrangement for this paper a photo-drama corresponding to the installments of "Runaway June" may now be seen at the leading moving picture theaters. By arrangement made with the Mutual Film Corporation it is not only possible to read "Runaway June" each week, but also after seeing to see moving pictures illustrating our story.

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation.

SYNOPSIS.

June, the bride of Ned Warner, impulsively leaves her husband on their honeymoon because she begins to realize that she must be entirely dependent on him for money. She desires to be independent. June is pursued by Gilbert Blye, a wealthy married man. She escapes from his clutches with difficulty. Ned searches distractedly for June, and, learning of Blye's designs, vows vengeance on him. After many adventures June is rescued from river pirates by Durban, an artist.

TWELFTH EPISODE. The Spirit of the Marsh.

CHAPTER I.

A STEAM yawl, with black smoke pouring from her stovepipe, suddenly stopped its churning half way across New York bay as the principal passenger, a long nosed woman with high arched brows, recognized through a wabily jointed telescope the leaders in a procession of five speedy motorboats which swept rapidly toward her.

"Turn around, quick!" the woman ordered as the first motorboat bore down, and she dashed a cinder from her beady eye. "Here comes the runaway bride!"

"I'm turning her now, ma'am," reported a short, thick individual whose round face was one consecutive smudge. "Don't you hear our engines stopping?"

"There she goes!" screeched Honoria Blye as the long, narrow steel gray boat dashed past, bearing, besides its driver, a beautiful young girl in a yacht costume, protected as much as possible from the flying spray in the arm of a tall man with a soft felt hat and a loosely knotted cravat.

"Why, she isn't with my husband!" cried Honoria Blye.

"No'm," confessed Bill Wolf, putting a fresh smudge on his round face as the cinder laden smoke rolled down; "not now." His perplexity cleared. He spied the second boat. "There he comes!"

"Gilbert!" screamed the woman as the second boat shot by, driven by a heavy man with a round head and thick lidded eyes, and carrying as its passenger a dark, handsome man with a black Vandyke, whose whole attention was fixed on the beautiful girl in the forward boat. "Gilbert! The dark, handsome man paid no attention. 'You viper!' she shrieked; then she whirled to Bill Wolf. 'Why don't you turn this around and chase them?'"

"We're turning, ma'am," reported Bill Wolf, looking anxiously in at the engineer. "Don't you hear the engine reversing?"

The third boat shot past, driven by a white mustached man in evening clothes.

"That's the creature who corrupted my husband!" shrieked Honoria. "He was with Gilbert the night he took his trunk away! You beast!" she screamed, and then she caught sight of the occupants in the fourth boat, a little chauffeur with blazing eyes and the tiniest of mustaches and a stiff woman, who bent eagerly forward.

"The maid of the runaway bride!" explained the justly famous detective, Bill Wolf. "Do you notice that we're turning now, ma'am?"

"Ned Warner, the deserted groom!" announced Honoria Blye as the fifth boat darted past. Ned held binoculars to his eyes, and they were focused alternately on beautiful June Warner in the arm of the artist and upon the closely pursuing Gilbert Blye. With him were a plump and placid small man, who drove with unwelcome creases in his brow, and a generously plump young woman, who was half hysterical.

"We're turned, ma'am," said Bill Wolf, clutching Honoria Blye by the elbow. "Don't you see the Woolworth building?"

On the dock there stood a watchman who consisted of an overcoat and cap, and silently, motionlessly hour by hour he looked out toward the bay. A swift motorboat, slender pointed, steel gray, dashed up, and from it the artist quickly lifted beautiful June Warner. The overcoat and cap moved not a muscle, but from far off Ned Warner, in the fifth boat of that strange regatta, through his powerful binoculars saw that landing, saw June cling to her newly found protector, saw, from the bend of his head, that the artist's eyes were filled with appreciation for the beauty of the fair little runaway bride. Straight up the dock they ran to the street and hailed a passing taxi and whirled away.

A keen little racer dashed up, spraying the water in a glittering translucent sheet as it curved into the slip. From it sprang the black Vandyked Gilbert Blye in time to see the taxicab whirl away with beautiful June. Through his powerful binoculars Ned Warner saw Blye gesticulating with anger, saw the heavy, round headed Edwards climb clumsily upon the dock and stamp his foot.

A third boat, a trim, little cutter. From it scrambled the white mustached Orin Cunningham. Through his powerful binoculars Ned Warner saw Cunningham, too, give way to a fit of fury, and Ned finally gritted his teeth and clinched his fists as he saw these scoundrelly pursuers of his lovely bride race up the dock. They hailed a passing taxi and whirled away up the street.

A fourth boat. A little French chauffeur with a tiny mustache and a stiff woman with high cheek bones, who bent and unbent painfully as she was pulled to the dock.

"Hey!" The overcoat and cap at last had moved, rapidly, violently. They pounced between Henri and Marie. "You're pinched!"

"Pinched, monsieur? Impossible!" protested Henri in astonishment. "For what is it that we are pinched? Behold the boat! We have returned it." Marie started to run away.

"Hooray!" On his side Henri jerked and, laughing gayly, sprinted after Marie. Up on the street, in the shelter of a warehouse, stood a touring car. As he ran Henri reached in his pocket for a key. Behind them came pounding the overcoat and cap, blowing a shrill watchman's whistle through the slit in the collar. The fugitives from justice, easily outdistancing the heavy rubber boots, gained the car. With a bow which had in it all the grace and gallantry which could have been displayed had he used much more time Henri assisted Marie to her seat. He sprang in beside her. He inserted his key. He pressed the starting button. Silence! Bahl! The motor was cold!

"You're under arrest!" And an ironlike middle finger thumped Henri on the shoulder.

"Arrest, M. Officer?" cried Henri. "Impossible!" And he gave another vigorous twirl of his crank.

"Look, the boat we have!"

"Do you know Officer Dowd?" asked Marie.

"Dowd?" repeated the solemn policeman, shaking his head.

"Do you know Officer O'Toole?" And she beamed high up into the solemn policeman's face.

"O'Toole? O'Toole? East side?"

"Listen, M. Officer, eh?" broke in Henri.

Marie had furtively kicked him on the shins.

"We took the boat, yes, but you will comprehend, monsieur?"

"Get it? He says he took the boat!" This was from the cap and the overcoat.

"Take 'em along!" rumbled the cap and overcoat.

"I guess I'll have to take you," the officer said regretfully. "Will you walk or will you ride? It's only up a couple of blocks."

"Walk!" exclaimed Henri in astonishment. "Never!" He rushed to the front of his car and cranked it. Off they went to the police station.

CHAPTER II.

A FURTIVE eyed butler with a young face on the withered and stooped body of an old man admitted the runaway bride and her escort into a magnificent studio hung with rare tapestries, embellished with exquisite paintings, fitted with quaint furniture and objects of art from all over the world. And here June Warner was introduced by Artist Durban to his wife, a bright eyed woman of great charm. She received June with almost gushing cordiality.

"The Spirit of the Marshes," laughed Durban, and it was with a professional eye that he this time surveyed the beautiful girl. "It was an utterly impossible adventure, my dear." He stood before an elaborately carved Florentine table, while the ladies sat in the inglenook, in the flare of the grateful fire. His eyes still glowed with the excitement of the morning, and he laughed. "First time I've had a chance to use the revolvers you make me carry when I go out for the marsh sunrise. I was busy sketching, trying to catch that wonderful scarlet of the sun and the mist—you know, my dear—when suddenly I heard a piercing scream. It could come but from one direction—the hut. Immense! A real adventure! I folded my easel, drew my revolvers and told Jimmy to push through the reeds for life or death. Before we could reach the hut there were shrieks upon shrieks in a young girl's voice, then shots, one after another. Wonderful! He shook back his dark hair and laughed, and his wife paled. June trembled and grew faint with the memory of it, and her eyes distended with a recurrence of her terror. "As we burst through the tall marsh rushes I saw on the island this beautiful creature held by a gigantic murderer. A woman with a beautiful silk shawl over her rough clothing was running toward the hut. Another murderous thief was lying on the ground. Down the channel from the open water there came two speed boats, one driven by a man with a mustache, in evening clothes and a silk hat, and the other, driven by a round headed man, carried a dark, handsome fellow with a black Vandyke, who stood up, shooting two revolvers. I fired in the air. The gigantic murderer dropped this beautiful creature, and she ran shrieking to my boat."

"You poor dear!" The artist's wife was instantly contrite. "You must be tired and cold and half famished and frightened to death. And you're all wet!" She raised June by the hand.

"The Spirit of the Marsh," mused the artist, studying June critically.

In a richly furnished office which contained no hint of business except for its telephone and the long rows of push buttons sat Gilbert Blye and Orin Cunningham and T. J. Edwards in earnest conference, Cunningham still in his evening clothes, Edwards still with his pajamas buttoned inside his coat and the carpet slippers on his feet. Button after button the black Vandyked man pushed, and one after another silent, stealthily moving, noncommunicative men came in and with grave faces received their instructions and departed.

Henri and Marie stood in front of a mottled faced desk sergeant with a sausage-like red mustache.

"Your names," he demanded.

"Voilà!" agreeably returned Henri. "I am—ugh!" And he lifted his foot sharply. Marie had kicked him on the shins.

"He is Jules Lefon," snapped Marie.

"Non! Non! Non! Non!" indignantly objected Henri, and there ensued a vigorous argument.

"And I am Rose Hesper," calmly finished Marie. "What's the charge?" asked the desk sergeant. "Swiping a boat." This hoarse information came from the overcoat and cap.

"I don't know about the Frenchman," whispered the phenomenally long policeman in the sergeant's red ear, "but the girl seems to be all right. She knows Officer Dowd, on the east side, and Moran and O'Toole and that bunch."

"Oh!" The information seemed to have some weight. The officer raised heavily from his wide chair and waddled through the door just back of him. He was gone long, silent minutes, but when he came back his brow was knotted into what seemed permanent corrugations. "So you're a friend of Dowd and Moran and O'Toole and that bunch!" he thundered at the luckless Marie. "Well, I telephoned 'em all, and not a one of 'em knows any Rose Hesper! Lock 'em up!"

"But, monsieur, it is all a mistake!" cried the pseudo Jules Lefon. "Mademoiselle is no!"

Crack! That kick on the shin was distinctly audible throughout the little room, but it had its effect. Henri at last had the hint, and he shut his lips tightly together beneath his tiny mustache as he and Marie, to the intense gratification of the overcoat and cap, were led away and locked in their respective cells.

In the dainty rose and white drawing room which Ned and June Warner had fitted up to be their nest Ned sat in consultation with June's father and mother and Bobbie Blethering and June's bosom friend, Iris, and the three detectives. On the floor by Mrs. Moore's feet lay June's handsome collier, Bouncer, but at the first mention of his mistress' name he was up and barking loudly.

JUNE, HALF CRAZED, SLIPPED OUT OF THE HOUSE

"A DEED TO THIS HOUSE," SHE CRIED

"Your wife's dog?" said the chief of Ned's detective force, and Ned nodded. "We'll take him."

How cheerful was the blazing fire as June reclined in the inglenook, a cup of hot coffee in a taboret by her side and a comfortable drowsiness stealing over her! She did not know how pretty she was in the filmy negligee, but Bennett and Vivian Durban did as they sat at the little studio table, which was their favorite breakfast place, and turned pleased eyes upon their beautiful guest.

A butler brought in the mail to the Durbans as they finished their breakfast. Durban walked out toward the garden. He seemed anxious to conceal something. His wife followed. Durban opened a long envelope with an expectant smile and took from it a folded document.

"My dear," his voice vibrated with pleasure, "can't keep my secret. Tomorrow is the fourth anniversary of our wedding, and here is my gift in commemoration of that happy event."

Her eyes shining, the woman took the document and opened it.

"A deed to this house!" she cried.

"And all that it contains," laughed her husband; "everything, including myself."

There was an exclamation of delight. The woman kissed him again and again and called him a dear boy and a good boy and the best husband in the world. June, who had awakened and followed them, drew back, so they would not know that she had heard, but she was glad for once to have been an unwitting eavesdropper, glad to have shared in this joyous moment.

CHAPTER III.

DOWN at the dock Ned Warner's detectives appeared, and Bouncer, picking up the trail at the landing, ran excitedly up to the street at the point where June and Bennett Durban had taken the taxi. Bouncer began to go round and round in widening circles, whining, his nose close to the ground. The trail was lost, as they had known that trail would be, and from here the detectives scattered, seeking everywhere in their own method for a clew to the whereabouts of the runaway bride. As they left the vicinity a rowboat pulled slowly up to the dock, dragging behind it a steam yawl with frosty mist on its stovepipe, and a very much begrimed lady with a long nose and high arched brows landed and went away without a word, pausing only to cast a look of withering scorn at the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf. That short, thick individual, with much puffing exertion, scrambled up and renewed the smudge on his face with a rotary motion of his sleeve and damned profusely; then he, too, stomped away.

Blye and Edwards and Cunningham in a luxurious limousine stopped at a house, where they were ushered into a gay parlor, where half a dozen handsomely gowned young women crowded around them with hilarious greetings. A large blond woman came in to greet the callers, and to her Blye showed the picture in the watch. She laughed and nodded her head.

Gilbert Blye gravely left Mrs. Russell's house. In the high ceiled studio June quietly watched Bennett Durban walking about with a perplexed air. "I can't find my brushes, Vivi," he blurted as his wife came in.

"It will be the easiest thing in the world from now on, Bennett," she informed him and showed him the box at the side of the big easel.

He stared at her in surprise.

"Good scheme," he granted, looking down at the brushes, and then he laughed. "However, I suppose I'll have them scattered all over the place again by tomorrow."

"Oh, no, Bennett," she returned. "I'd rather you'd keep them here, please. I don't like my house all cluttered up."

"I don't believe I can paint if I don't have to find my favorite brush behind something or other," he confessed. "Why, where's my good old chaise longue?"

"I had it taken out. It was so very disreputable." Mrs. Durban was studying the room with haughty severity. "I want my house to represent me."

The young butler came in, dragging a tall step-ladder.

"What are you going to do, Oscar?" inquired Durban sharply.

"I am to remove these tapestries, sir," he reported, setting his ladder up by the side of one of them.

"The dickens you are!" exclaimed Durban in surprise. "Get out!"

"It was madam's orders, sir."

"Oh!" Durban looked at his wife slowly.

"You may take them down, Oscar," said Mrs. Durban quietly, and both the artist and his wife were silent while the tapestries were removed.

"Vivi, I don't understand," puzzled her husband. "I don't see why you'd remove important things without consulting me." And he glanced at June, who had returned to the house to resume her nap. Her eyes were closed, although she was not sleeping.

The woman's chin went up.

"Bennett, dear, this is my house."

"Oh, yes, yes, to be sure!" He walked very quietly back to his big canvas and studied it for a long time without seeing it at all.

June was not only shocked, but filled with compassion. She understood as the man could not the reason for the astounding change in the woman. The sudden acquisition of property had transformed her entire nature, had given her a dizzy haughtiness, had twisted her view until she placed an utterly false valuation upon herself and upon everything around her. Money again! Always money!

Officer Dowd walked into the police station just as the desk sergeant with the sausage shaped red mustache gave way to one with a blue eye and a blue chin, and the new incumbent greeted Officer Dowd with effusive cordiality.

"What's bringing you into my district? Or are you off duty?"

"Dan, you got a girl here by the name of Rose Hesper that claims to know me, and I just dropped in to mug her."

"You can look them all over if you've time," granted the sergeant, and Dowd walked back into the cell room. "Rose Hesper's in cell 5."

"Why, hello, Marie!" exclaimed Dowd. "What you in for?"

Marie looked up with a jerk.

"There's a little friend of mine here, too," she explained. "It was all a mistake. I'm in an awful hurry!"

"Wait a minute." And Officer Dowd stalked out to the desk. "Well, Dan, you got the wrong parties," he announced. "What's against my friend, Rose Hesper?"

"Copping a motorboat last night," said the sergeant, looking at the blotter.

"Wrong party," returned Dowd promptly. "I was with Rose Hesper myself last night, her and her little friend, and we didn't leave the cafe till nearly daybreak."

The sergeant made an entry on the blotter. "I'll tell that dock watchman it's an alibi."

"Will he stand for it?" Dowd asked.

"If he don't we'll push him off the dock," calmly stated the sergeant. "Joe, bring out 5 and 17."

Five was out first and displayed her friendly gums. "Where's your little friend?" asked Officer Dowd, waiting and glancing past a dejected looking little chauffeur with a tiny mustache who came through the cell room door.

"That's him," and Marie introduced Henri.

The big policeman and the little chauffeur glared at each other a moment, while the cheek bones of Marie grew red with pleasure.

Henri looked at him wistfully.

"I am happy that I have met you, M. Dowd," he bowed politely. "Now we go, Mlle. Marie."

Marie displayed her friendly smile to Henri and then to Officer Dowd.

"Won't you come with us?" she inquired.

"You'll come with me!" he blurted and grabbed her by the arm.

Bill Wolf called up Honoria Blye.

"Got him!" he triumphantly yelled. "Say, listen, I just done a fine piece of work. I sleuthed the other party's detectives. They got the girl's dog, and they've spotted your husband's limousine. Join me in front of the Blakely building, and I'll lead you to them."

At the same moment Ned's detectives were telephoning the same information to the anxious group in the Warner apartments.

"Didn't I tell you we'd find a clew?" exclaimed Iris Blethering and sobbed to relieve her feelings.

The little runaway bride was a picture which would have held the eye of any artist as she lay asleep in the inglenook with the flare of the flames dancing about her. The filmy negligee had slipped from one smooth, round shoulder and her pretty head, with the wavy hair rippling back from her brow, rested upon a tapering white arm. She suddenly awoke under Durban's intense gaze and, flushing, hastily drew the negligee in place.

"You've spoiled it!" cried Durban. "My Spirit of the Marsh! Come here!" He caught her hand and raised her.

He led her, bewildered, before the big canvas, where, crudely indicated by a few rough strokes of the crayon, the "Spirit of the Marsh" hovered over her domain.

"You must be my model!" he excitedly informed her. "I will pay you any price you wish. Here is some money in advance." And, jerking a wad of loose bills from his pocket, he thrust them in her hand. "Now stand here." He was so quick, so energetic, so fired with impatient fervor, that June had no time to think, much less protest. He half led, half pulled, her on the small dais which he hastily shoved into position. He caught up a sharp knife. It would not do. He ran to a workbasket in the alcove and brought back a long pair of shears and with one clip slit the filmy negligee at the shoulder.

Toward the Durban house there dashed two automobiles, the electric of Honoria Blye and the Moore family car, with the parents and husband of June and her bosom friend, Iris Blethering, and Bobbie Marie and Officer Dowd were suddenly interrupted in their leisurely stroll by a loud yelp, and a white and brown streak threw itself against Marie Bouncer! He barked; he circled; he ran up the street a little way, ran back and darted off again.

"Miss Junie!" cried Marie, and, clutching Officer Dowd by the sleeve, she ran up the street after the dog.

Vivian Durban, her chin tilted, her face serene, her step deliberate and leisurely, came into her studio. Whatever she had been about to say froze on her lips as she saw the tableau before the canvas. The exquisitely molded runaway bride, draped like the Spirit of the Marsh, stood upon the dais.

"Oh!" The word was a shriek. Vivian Durban rushed down the length of the studio, towering with rage. "So that's it!" she cried. "That's why you brought this creature here!"

"Out of my house!" the woman screamed at June, her fingers working convulsively. "Out of my house this minute!" And she started toward the frightened June.

"Here!" Bennett Durban caught his wife's arm and held her back.

She stopped, and slowly her chin went up. She turned on him coldly.

"Either that creature leaves—goes instantly—or you go! This is my house!"

With a low cry June had darted across the studio, clasping her gauzy draperies about her as best she could. In the hall she turned to dart up the stairs, where her clothes had been left.

"Out of my house!" sternly called the woman, and as June stopped, bewildered, half crazed, the front door was opened by the smirking butler, whose furtive eye leered at her.

Faint, dazed, scarce knowing what she did, June, draped as the Spirit of the Marsh, slipped out of the house and into the street.

The artist and his wife went to the porch and watched the girl flutter away. The woman turned to Durban. "You're in love with her," she snapped.

Around the corner, two blocks away, tore the Moore car, with Ned Warner peering intently ahead. From the opposite direction came Honoria Blye's electric. In front of the Durban door stood a luxurious limousine with the black shades drawn. Gilbert Blye!

As June dashed down the steps the door of the car opened, and the white mustached Orin Cunningham sprang out and caught June by the wrist. Another figure sped from the Durban door, close upon the beautiful Spirit of the Marsh. It was Gilbert Blye, and he held outstretched a voluminous black cloak.

NORMALS SLUG WAY TO VICTORY OVER INDIANS SATURDAY

Oliver and Weisse Contribute Triples to the Merry Pastime; Many Errors in the Game

Using their game with the La Crosse Normal school for practice for their fielders proved disastrous to the Tomah Indians, who went down to defeat before Carter's proteges by a score of 11 to 1 in a tilt played amid dreary surrounding at Normal field Saturday afternoon. Ten hits for a total of sixteen bases were made by the normal men in thirty-eight times at bat.

Oliver and Weisse grabbed off the batting honors of the game, the diminutive right fielder cracking two hits to deep center field, each being good for three bases.

Normal scored two runs in the first and came across in the third with six more. They scored again in the fourth and later twice in the seventh.

Hill singled for the Indians in the second and scored on a stolen base, a passed ball and an error.

The Indians played ragged ball, eight errors being chalked up against them. Johnny Ray, star quarterback of the football team of the Tomah institution, made three of the boots, and Firstbaseman Charles was responsible for the same number.

ATHLETES SCORE IN SIXTH

Moppy Whiffs Thirteen Men but Misses Chances to Put His Team in the Lead

Just one score difference separated the W. B. U. Athletes and Moppy Anderson's Rushfordians yesterday when the curtain fell on the game at League park. Moppy lost by the score of 1 to 0 in what was probably the best game played on the local grounds this year.

"Moppy Anderson" Day turned out cold and dreary and showery. The three hundred or more Rushford fans who had intended to come to La Crosse on a special train stayed at home and as a result Anderson had but a handful of rooters from his home town. Many La Crosse people, however, including a number of kin, yelled heartily for the former Athletic pitcher.

Miss Chances to Score

On two occasions, Moppy had a chance to win his game but failed.
 In the seventh, Selvig got a life when his fly was dropped by Grosskopf in right field. Krupp singled to left field and Anderson came to bat.
 He made a valiant effort but missed three. Sundby fled to Layman and Selvig was doubled at second on the play.

In the ninth, with two out, Selvig was hit Krupp took second on an infield tangle in which Layman overthrew to Krause, Selvig taking third.
 Moppy had one strike when Selvig was caught off third, Weeks to Williams.

The Athletes scored in the sixth when Rogstad was hit. Layman sacrificed and Grounds singled, advancing Rogstad to third. Grounds stole second and Rogstad scored on a long sacrifice fly to left field. Williams struck out.

Thirteen Athletes died by the whiff route, Moppy's curves having their effect. Copey struck out eight men and was steadier than Moppy with men on bases. Moppy issued three passes.

BACK HAUL RATE METHOD LAID DOWN

Interstate Commerce Commission Tells Road How They Can Meet Canal Competition in Rates

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The interstate commerce commission today issued an order disapproving plans suggested by western railroads for constructing rates to the Pacific coast and intermediate back haul points.

The order sets up instead the commission's own plan for disposing of the conflicting contentions of the railroads and the various communities affected—practically every important northern and western city having taken part in the recent hearings on the subject.

Carriers are authorized by today's orders to construct rates to back haul points in the following fashion:

By adding to terminal rates not more than 75 per cent of the local rates from the nearest terminal to destination, or by adding arbitraries to the terminal rates, varying with distance from the ports, such arbitraries to be not more than 75 per cent of the local rates, the aggregate not to exceed the maximum prescribed for intermediate points in this order.

Cities entitled to terminal rates

include:

San Diego, San Pedro, East San Pedro, Wilmington, East Wilmington, San Francisco, Oakland, Astoria, Portland, Vancouver, Bellingham, South Bellingham, Everett, Tacoma, Seattle, Aberdeen, Sequim and Cosmopolis.

The commission's order of January 29 is modified to permit maximum less-than-carload rates from the Missouri river to intermediate points on first and second class commodities of $1.72 per 100 pounds when lower rates are applicable to coast terminals.

"We have reached the following conclusions:

"1.—We should authorize a certain degree of relief from the requirements of the long and short haul clause on this traffic to enable these carriers to more effectively compete with the water lines, but the rail carriers cannot expect, and the commission should not authorize, such a degree of relief as will secure to the rail lines the same percentage of the traffic to the terminals as they enjoyed prior to the opening of the canal.

"2.—They can secure a portion of the traffic to the terminals on these commodities by the establishment of the rates proposed, and such rates will afford some revenue in excess of the out-of-pocket cost involved.

"3.—The carriers should, within reasonable limits, be authorized to make such rates to intermediate points in the so-called back haul as will induce the direct movement of freight to points from the territories served by these lines.

BANDITS MAKE HAUL

CHICAGO, May 17.—Boy bandits pulled another daring daylight hold-up and robbery Saturday as they entered a restaurant at the corner of Halsted and Adams streets during the height of the Saturday afternoon shopping and grabbed a handbag from Miss Mary Harvey containing $226. The girl had just drawn the money from the bank to pay the employees of the Improved Sponging and Refining company. A mob of men and boys chased the bandits who escaped.

DRIVER HELD UP

CHICAGO, May 17.—William Whalen, driver of a department store delivery wagon was held up at the intersection of 43rd street and Vernon avenue Saturday afternoon by four youthful gunmen in an automobile. The boy robbers were 20 and 21 years old. Each held two automatic revolvers. They forced Whalen to stop and hand over his cash box, containing $350.

Intellectual Conviction.

The phrase "intellectual conviction" is misleading. There can be no conviction (or mental conclusion) without intellect. One may have a notion born of fancy, or a sentiment arising from desire; but a conviction means the result of a logical process—a process which is, from beginning to end, an affair of intellect, and nothing else.

(Written for the United Press)
NEW YORK, May 17.—As far as New York is concerned Jess Willard has disappeared from the spotlight. Rarely is his name mentioned by the general public and even the fight fans have many other topics to argue about than the man who humbled the giant black man at Havana. Seldom now in fight circles is heard the heated discussions over his merits and defects as was the situation some years back when champions of other days held the limelight. Willard is even creating less discussion than did Johnson when he won the title from Jeffries. Local ring stars are furnishing more excitement than the champion heavyweight.

How much Jess' stage work has dampened his popularity is impossible to calculate, but not a few fight bugs would rather see the giant cowboy in the ring than behind the footlights. Comparatively few people have seen Jess in action and that is what the followers of the fistie sport desire above everything else. Even if they can not see him in action they like to read about him.

There is not much meat in the dispatches about Willard for the ring side followers. No one would deny the champ his just share of the little iron men, for his feat in defeating Johnson is worthy of a substantial reward. But between one night stands the big white champ might take a night off now and then and display his abilities to a fight hungry public.

And perhaps the unpopularity of Willard as a stage favorite will force him into the ring again sooner than he expected. There is little doubt that Willard is not making a howling success of his circus stunt on the footboards. He is not well adapted to that kind of pastime as some former boxer-actors were. And if press reports can be credited Jess himself cares little for the glare of the footlights. He wants the limelight but the reflection from the little lamps bores him.

A return to the ring would hardly endanger Jess' newly won title. No one is within several years of besting him in a fistie argument. At least, not from surface appearance. Some one may develop as rapidly as did Jess himself and humble the western fight king, but the chance of this occurring is remote. Jess had been plugging at the boxing game for four or five years before he accomplished the "white hope" dream of the ringside sports.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

BY HAL SHERIDAN
(Written for the United Press.)

Yesterday was rather a quiet day, baseliacally speaking, but Ed Koney managed to slam out his usual homer.

Clarence Rowland, who, besides bearing that name, manages the Chicago White Sox is looking for the guy that said the Mackmen were shot, and that Larry LaJolie was all in. They did not look it yesterday.

Crap's luck against George Dauss. After winning six straight he dropped the seventh to the Yanks.

Yesterday was a bad day all around for winning pitchers. Guy Morton of Cleveland after winning five straight, dropped the sixth, which went fourteen innings.

Incidentally, the Red Sox took a slight upward turn. Joe Wood showed some of his 1912 stuff for ten innings.

Chicago's Whales were two runs behind in the ninth. The bases were choked and two were out. Amid the plaudits of the multitude Josepa Tinker doffed his sweater and strode to the plate, the exact replica of Mr. Casey. There is no joy in Chicago—mighty Joe whiffed.

Yesterday was a great one for extra inning battles. The Senators dropped to the Browns in eleven innings, and the Kaw Feds trimmed the Slou Feds in ten.

Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, May 17.—Continued reports of extensive damage to crops by the Hessian fly, the chinch bug and red rust caused sharply higher wheat prices today. The market opened with an over Sunday advance of 1/2 in July options. May and September were unchanged. The sharp advance began shortly after the opening, prices at one time being 2 1/2, 1 1/2 and 1/2 higher than at the opening.

A steady buying movement kept oats prices up nearly all day. Prices at the opening showed over Sunday advances of 1/2 in May and July, while September was down a fraction. Later prices advanced 1/4 each in the three active futures.

the limitations of neutrality a vast number of our people sympathize with Germany in her struggle against odds. Realizing the injustice of England's unlawful stretching of war rules to cut off food from Germany's civilian population, made possible by Britain's mastery of the sea, many of us have hoped Germany would be able to so maintain her submarine warfare against English merchant shipping as to effectively retaliate without serious infringement of neutral rights. Even now, over the bodies of our dead, we hear no ill will; rather we regret that German zeal over-stepped caution and miscalculated consequences.

But as Americans let us not deceive ourselves. The president and his cabinet, fulfilling their sworn duty to this people as they see it, have assumed a position from which dignified retreat is impossible. In unmistakable language they have submitted to Germany demands that the latter government can meet only by acquiescence involving the abandonment of a fixed war policy, or by rejection. In case of rejection, we have said our last word, excepting that we may reiterate, and reiteration would be empty dalliance.

Germany may prefer our friendship to the continuance of war methods which have proved annoying rather than effective punishment of her foes. She can consent to our demands with honor and without material loss. The friendly, even solicitous tone of the Wilson note promotes this possibility. It is all America's uppermost thought and most earnest hope that she may do so.

But circumstances, and the character of the German nation render quite possible the adoption by the kaiser and his advisors of this attitude.

The allies, in violation of international law, have deprived the United States of the exercise of their right to ship food to the civil population of Germany.

Because the United States did not enforce its rights in the matter, German civilians face want and possible starvation.

In retaliation, Germany has set aside another rule of international law, resorting to its only resource on the sea—a submarine campaign against English merchant ships.

The United States now demands that Germany cease its reprisals because America's neutral rights suffer. Very well, Germany will meet that demand provided the United States will stand squarely upon its rights with the allies, and enforce its legal privilege of food shipments to civil Germans.

The adoption of this position by Germany would constitute a refusal to accede to the demands of the United States, and put it squarely up to this government either to back down or to exact that "strict accounting" to which the administration has committed the nation.

And when one nation says to another that it MUST do a thing, and when the nation addressed does NOT do that thing, what appears to be the next step of the nation that, having made the demand, has given assurance that it will "omit no word or act" necessary to effective insistence upon the thing it has demanded?

Turn it over, upside-down and sideways, and the answer is the same. Germany must cease to do that which she must do if she shall continue submarine warfare against merchantmen.

And there we are.

To hope that Germany will be willing to give up the small advantage of a practice that hampers, but does not materially interrupt, British commerce, and which has been pursued at an emphatically disproportionate cost to German prestige and favor among the neutral nations, is our best prospect. In the interim of awaiting the emperor's reply, our warm regard for Germany—her people, her ideals, her achievements and her institutions—should not abate. But while we may hope for this grace of Providence, let us be prepared for the more unpleasant possibility. Unwarranted optimism is not a virtue. Let us not shrink the stern reality that we are a peaceful people on the brink of war. We have had little use for militant patriotism. No matter where born nor how bred, let us accustom ourselves to our Americanism by wearing it.

GRUB WORM ARMY INVADES WISCONSIN

Government Experts Advise Farmers Not to Plant Hill Crops Where Sod Crops Have Been

MADISON, Wis., May 17.—The invasion of Wisconsin has begun. The enemy is numbered in billions. His toll will not be taken in lives, but in dollars. It is estimated that the losses will be at least $5,000,000.

This army of invasion is composed of white grubs. Prof. J. G. Sanders, chief nursery inspector of the state university, has just returned from a scouting expedition. He reports that the enemy is strongly entrenched and that only the strongest offensive methods will prevent total devastation of some parts of the state. In Grant county, he said he found an average of two grubs to the square foot.

"When it is considered that corn usually is planted in hills three feet apart and in rows an equal distance, giving each hill nine square feet," he said, "it means eighteen of these grubs to a hill. How long a hill will last after to grubs start work depends only on the size of the hill. Its destruction is certain.

Advice for Farmers
"Farmers should not use land devoted to sod crops last year for hill crops this year. This is the year of the greatest activity for the three year grub, and if corn, tobacco, potatoes and other hill crops are planted on ground where June bugs laid their eggs last year they will be utterly destroyed. Almost any kind of root is good food for the grubs. They have even been known to attack the roots of fruit trees when other food was denied them.

"It is estimated that billions of these grubs are ready to attack the crops in the southwestern part of the state. They are found this year in territory where they were never known before. Estimating the crop alone as worth $25,000,000 and the loss by grubs at twenty per cent—I have found wide areas where the damage was forty-seven per cent—one can realize the awful damage that can be caused by these grubs. It is possible that in some places there are 100,000 of these grubs to the acre. Crops planted there would have no chance."

Prof. Sanders explained the life history of the grub. He said the eggs were laid early last spring and the larvae did comparatively little damage. They withstood the winter weather by digging themselves in. This spring they abandoned their trenches and came to the surface to feed on roots. In the fall they will again dig themselves in and in the spring come out for a few days' feeding, lapse into the chrysalis stage, and in early fall develop into beetles. They will remain in the ground until 1917, when they will come forth again and lay their eggs for another crop of grubs.

Government experts have been at work on the grub problem for several years. No means of fighting them successfully has been discovered. Fall plowing crushes a large number, but does not exterminate. The method which can be followed with the greatest degree of success is starvation. This is expensive as it means absolute clearing of large areas.

CORN MEN DOUBT 2,000 YEAR STORY

JANESVILLE, Wis., May 17.—The authenticity of the "2,000 year old corn" which has been introduced into Wisconsin is being questioned by agricultural and botanical experts. Because of this controversy which has sprung up there is renewed interest in the experiments being conducted by several Rock county farmers.

H. H. Bliss of this city who has promoted two corn growing contests for boys of this county, received fifty-four kernels of the strange corn from Alexander J. W. Copeland of Chicago. He sent some to the state experimental station at Madison and divided the rest among Rock county farmers. Whether or not the grain is of as ancient a lineage as is claimed, its peculiar properties are bound to make it a standard species if it is found that Wisconsin soil and climate is suited to its extensive cultivation.

Seven ears of this remarkable corn were found buried in a box in the mountains of Colorado. The material of the box was similar to cement, and it had been placed in what was evidently a tomb constructed by some prehistoric race. Scientists differ as to what race it was. Some believe it was the Aztecs.

The corn was found by a government geological party and one of the ears came into the possession of Copeland. He retained the seed for three years and then planted some and gave the rest to his friends. It yielded a strange species of corn. The stalks were 14 to 18 feet high and the yield but four ears to the stalk. However, each kernel had two or more stalks, so the yield in percentage was abnormally great. One of the ears had four hundred and ten kernels. In 1914 Copeland sold one ear for $200 and many kernels for twenty-five cents to a dollar each.

The doubters do not belittle the results obtained by Copeland but they contend that he was victimized in the matter of the grains family tree. If the farmers of this county and the state experimental station obtain a good yield, however, the corn's lineage will matter little. The experts at the experimental station will make an effort to trace its origin.

NEW YORK, May 17.—What should have been expected after the conditions known to exist in yesterday's market occurred on the Stock Exchange Saturday. Friday's five hours of selling by weak speculators to strong investors at rapidly declining prices was bound to have its effect. Prices opened in the morning at over-night advances, running in many shares to a point or more, and a steady advance continued throughout the day. The trend of the market was almost interruptedly upward but the striking fact about the day's movement was, that notwithstanding the day's advance of 1 to 3 points, there was no excited bidding up of prices. This is an altogether desirable situation; one might almost call it a correct reflection of the attitude of the American people as a whole toward the uncertainty of the hour.
